BOMB IN THEATER; 3 BURNED

END TAX STRIKE AND PAY US,' IS TEACHERS' PLEA

Can't Hold Out for Long, They Say.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

...breaking the "taxpayers' strike" was agreed on last night as the first step in the relief of the 14,000 public school teachers who have not had a pay day since April. This judgment was reached by the Chicago Men Teachers' union at a prolonged meeting in the City club. The members of the union has a reported membership of 1,000—decided to call upon the Cook county board to hire outside judges from downstate to hurry up the hearings on contested tax cases involving $75,000,000.

The teachers also urged the governor's revenue commission to finish its studies quickly with a view of having the legislature called to Springfield in special session before the end of October, if possible.

Not Ready for a "Strike."

"Don't rock the boat," was the plea raised by some of the leaders at the meeting, in reference to talk of "strikes" and of asking the school board to close up the classrooms on Nov. 1.

The closing of the schools in case no pay is forthcoming Nov. 1, was discussed earlier in the day at a mass meeting of north side teachers at Lane Tech school, and although the suggestion was loudly applauded, it was not pushed to a vote.

Some of the men teachers at the north side gathering raised the argument that a little boat rocking would do no end of good. "Rock the boat and the citizens will come and man the pumps, maybe," remarked one naval training instructor.

"Bad Schools in Depression."

But the general sentiment of the meeting was registered in a resolution to the effect that it is in periods of depression that the schools are most indispensable, since young people, "unable to find work, must be in school or on the streets."

The mass meetings of the teachers, now being organized on each side of the city, met with approval of the union as agencies for stirring up public sentiment.

"I hope they continue," said James A. Meade of the Washburne Continuation school, president of the union. "Let the people know the teachers are dissatisfied. Let them know how we feel and the desperate situation in which many find themselves, some without even carfare. But don't let's rock the boat."

Teachers Tell Their Troubles.

"I lost my car," said a lanky delegate from Austin High. "I managed to get it back, but the payment cost me $60 more because it was in scrip. I lost my home because they wouldn't take scrip. The telephone company wouldn't take scrip, they shut me off. I had money in two banks. Both of them went broke. Lots of others are in the same boat as I am."

"Yes," interrupted another delegate. "In our school there are teachers who sign checks in the lunch room. All they've got is carfare."

Thurlow G. Essington, former state senator, spoke on the general situation and what may be expected from the legislature. After that there was a shower of questions. The main query was, "How soon can relief arrive?"

"Too Little Common Sense."

"We teachers," remarked Campbell Meade of the Washburne school, "have had too much of everything except common sense. I was supposed to be an educater until I attended one of these mass meetings; then I wanted to go back as a longshoreman. There's been too much fooling. Scrip was knocked out today. Some of you teachers went out and broadcast that scrip was no good. Now scrip is held invalid, and you can't even get that."

"The police and firemen were paid, but the teachers are out in the cold, and the people don't know it generally," remarked a delegate.

"Yes," said another, "Mayor Cermak says if the school board resigned he would be pay for teachers. Why not?"

"The mayor has disavowed any responsibility for the board of education," rejoined President Meade. "Our position is one of neutrality. Whether the mayor could do anything if the board resigned I don't know. But the teachers are the only group unpaid."

"Are the banks hostile?" asked a delegate.

"They are not hostile, I believe," replied Mr. Essington. "But you can't

FATE OF CAPONE WILL REST WITH THE JURY TODAY

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

United States District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson will make the closing argument in the Al Capone income tax case this morning and the jury will be instructed and will retire for a verdict early this afternoon, according to plans made last night.

GEORGE E. Q. JOHNSON.

The government has two hours for its final argument. Instructions of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson are expected to take about an hour. The district attorney may decide to divide his time with one of his assistants. Mr. Johnson has taken no active part in the courtroom procedure until this point.

Defense Presents Its Plea.

Capone's attorneys, Michael Ahern and Albert Fink, had the major part of the court session yesterday in presenting their pleas to the jury. Both attorneys argued the weakness of the income tax law, its alleged vagueness, in their talks to the jury, presenting some of the same arguments they had used in their vain effort to get the court to direct a verdict for the defendant.

Mr. Fink sought to have the jury find a verdict for Capone on the argument that the evidence does not support the felony counts in the indictment, that no attempt to evade the income tax has been shown. He argued that failure to file a return could not be construed as an attempt to evade.

Judge Indicates His View.

Judge Wilkerson, indicating in advance his instructions on this point, said that while failure to file in itself was not an evasion, it could be so considered in connection with concealment of property. There is evidence that Capone had money sent to him under assumed names and his property was never held in his own name.

Legally speaking, Mr. Ahern argued strenuously on the proposition that no "corpus delicti" has been established in the case; that is, that no legally taxable income has been proved by the government. Judge Wilkerson also touched on this point in conversation from the bench when he said that he thought the admissions of the defendant established that.

Capone Interested Listener.

Capone was probably the most interested person in the courtroom as the arguments proceeded. The government lawyers spoke caustically of him. His own atterneys spoke kindly of him.

Mr. Ahern compared him to a modern mythical Robin Hood, a creation of the newspapers, and said that the government had moved against him as a result of public hysteria reaching to Washington. He told the story of the Roman senator, Cato, and how, when Cato saw Carthage prosperous and happy he kept shouting in the Roman senate that Carthage must be destroyed. Mr. Ahern drew the modern corollary, referring to censorious agencies which had banded themselves together to run the country and now shouted:

"Capone must be destroyed."

Both attorneys said again and again that what was being attempted was without legal sanction in the body of proof offered by the government, that the government was seeking to emancipate itself from the law.

Pictures Al as Beloved Chief.

Capone, according to Mr. Fink, was loved by his followers, open handed, generous, a man that a bookmaker would trust with a $10,000 bet. Mr. Ahern said his client was one of the great spendthrifts of history.

"This does not fit in with the government picture of a miserly effort to evade income tax," said Mr. Fink. "A tin horn and a piker might try to defraud the government of such a tax, but not Capone.

"Suppose that until May 26, 1927, when the Supreme court spoke, Capone, like many other men, believed that money received from illicit transactions was not taxable income. Suppose he had been advised of that, and

DIVORCES WIFE BUT CONTINUES TO LIVE WITH HER

Mrs. Josie Dennehy, 2732 West Pershing road, filed a petition in the Circuit court yesterday charging that her husband, Michael, divorced her two years ago, but kept the fact from her and continued to live with her until last week.

Her petition, filed by Attorney Victor Frohlich, asks that the divorce granted to Dennehy be set aside and that Mrs. Dennehy be given an opportunity to defend herself on the charge of drunkenness on which he obtained the decree. The decree was granted on April 13, 1929, by Judge Stanley Klarkowski. Mrs. Dennehy says her husband, who is the owner of a soft drink parlor, continued to treat her kindly and gave her flowers and candy frequently until a month ago. Her suspicions were aroused when he cut her household allowance in half and began staying away from home at night, she said. She investigated and discovered on Oct. 10 that he had obtained a divorce, she said.

PLANES RESCUE PASSENGERS ON ICE BOUND SHIP

NOME, Alaska, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Airplanes aided today in the removal of passengers aboard the steamer Baychimo, locked in the arctic ice pack several hundred miles north of here.

Two cabin planes, flown by pilots Vic Cross and Chester Brown, arrived near the Baychimo, a Hudson's Bay company ship, off Wainwright yesterday and preparations were made to fly the passengers to Kotzebue, 250 miles away.

A brief message from Wainwright said a number of passengers and their baggage were loaded into the planes for the flight.

Giant Akron May Fly Over Chicago Today

BULLETIN.

Akron, O., Oct. 17.—[Saturday.]—(AP)—The U. S. S. Akron, cruising the middle west on a two day test flight, radioed word here today that she had passed over Springfield, Ill., at 4 a. m. today and was proceeding to Chicago by way of Bloomington.

A direct message from the ship to the Great Lakes Naval Training station was received at midnight in response to a query by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. It stated: "The Akron will probably fly over Chicago early Saturday forenoon."

The Akron is the navy's newest airship scouting cruiser, officially designated as ZRS-4. Early yesterday morning the big craft rose from its field at Akron, O., to stay aloft for 48 hours on a 2,400 mile endurance flight, the last of a series of test flights required by the navy before its acceptance from the builders, the Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation.

Comes East from Omaha.

The air giant is to pass over Chicago from the west, on its return from Omaha, the most westerly point in the cruise. The ship touched various Ohio points early in the day yesterday and picked up the Ohio river at Cincinnati, following that stream to Louisville. Thence it continued along Indiana border towns to Evansville, turned northwest to St. Louis, and then headed west for the circle around Omaha.

This endurance flight will complete the 180 hours of test flights required. Previous test flights have indicated the ship meets navy specifications, and it is expected to be delivered to the navy at the Lakehurst, N. J., station next week.

Top Speed 84 Miles an Hour.

The Akron was started in 1929 and made its first flight, for 2 hours and 47 minutes, on Sept. 23. It cost $5,375,000 to build and exceeds all its predecessors, both in the United States and abroad, in nearly all its performance qualifications. With an overall length of 785 feet, the Akron carries 6,500,000 cubic feet of helium gas.

Eight Maybach motors, installed inside the hull, propel the Akron at a top speed of 84 miles per hour, or at a cruising speed of 50 miles per hour. The propellor shafts tilt on their axis through 90 degrees, and the motors are reversible, allowing the propellors to assist in raising or lowering the ship, as well as to brake its forward movement.

Lieutenant Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, senior surviving officer of the destroyed airship Shenandoah, is in command of the Akron, which carries a crew of 11 officers and 40 men. Among many outstanding features of the Akron is a compartment in the fore hull in which five navy pursuit planes will be carried.

SEIZE, THEN FREE FOREST VIEW'S CHIEF OF POLICE

William Dillon was having a shoe shine in a barber shop at 72 East 22d street when Policemen John Hanrahan and Michael Lalawski entered. They asked him what his name was and he said it was William Dillon.

"Do they ever call you Porky?" asked Lalawski.

"Yes," said Dillon, "but it's a bum rap. Porky Dillon is a criminal. I, gentlemen, am the chief of police of Forest View."

He displayed his star and, as one policeman to another, claimed immunity from arrest. Hanrahan and Lalawski took him into a car and started for the detective bureau. Before they reached there Ald. William Pacelli of the 20th ward and State Senator Daniel Serritella, former city sealer and a Capone lieutenant, were telling Chief of Detectives Schoemaker that the chief of police of Forest View was a fine fellow and shouldn't stay in jail.

An examination of Dillon's credentials showed that he was the veritable chief and he was freed. Forest View has been for a long time, according to repute, under domination of Al Capone's forces. Dillon was arrested by federal authorities last spring on a charge of violating the prohibition law, but the case was dropped.

ELTINGE HURT BY SWORDFISH; HAS OPERATION

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 16.—(AP)—Julian Eltinge won his battle with a 190 pound swordfish, but the marlin got in several rapier like thrusts which caused the famed female impersonator to undergo an intestinal operation.

Details of the sea fight were disclosed today at the hospital where Eltinge was recovering and Dr. Earl C. O'Donnell, a companion, was under treatment for an infected hand. James Jump, fisherman, received severe cuts on one hand.

Blast Throws 800 in Panic; Seize Victim

Three men were burned, one seriously, and 800 theatergoers made a panic stricken rush for exits last night when an incendiary bomb exploded in the Colony theater at 3208 West 59th street.

Peter Mooney, 30 years old, 2357 Emerald avenue, a former convict, was the man most seriously hurt. Investigation caused the police to believe that he carried the bomb into the theater himself and that it exploded prematurely while he was handling it or while it lay in his lap. He suffered burns from his waist to his knees and on his hands and face.

The others were burned on the hands when they beat out the flames on Mooney's clothing. They are Edward Foy, 5643 South Spaulding avenue, a city fireman, and Edward Schaeffer, 3021 Clifton Park avenue.

First Bombing of Patrons.

This bomb was the first that has been directed at showgoers in the theters that have allied themselves to fight against demands of the motion picture operators' union headed by Thomas E. Maloy. Previously there had been thirteen bombs directly attributed to the owner-operator war, but all had been exploded with the purpose of doing property damage.

Mooney, who was taken to the Holy Cross hospital and later to the Bridewell hospital, denied being a bomber and asserted the explosive had been tossed at him from the balcony. None of the other patrons of the theater near him saw the supposed throwing and two women who were seated behind Mooney said he had been manipulating some object in a handkerchief. A wet handkerchief was found under the seat he occupied.

Bomb Causes a Panic.

The bomb made little noise, but its bright flash and the pungent odor of sulphur and phosphorus that followed it caused the panic in the audience. Mooney, with his clothing ablaze, ran from his aisle seat to the door. Foy and Schaeffer, assisted by Policeman James Lawler, stationed in front to prevent bombings, extinguished the flames that flared around him.

J. C. Mitchell, manager of the theater, and Robert Sommerfield, an usher, declared that when Mooney was taken into a basement room for emergency treatment he shouted that he wanted clothes and wanted to get out and didn't want to go to a hospital.

After Mooney was questioned at the Bridewell hospital, Lieut. Walter Storms of the detective bureau ordered that his home be searched. Mooney's record at the bureau of identification shows that he was arrested for burglary in 1922, and that in 1927, after being convicted of a burglary he was sent to Joliet penitentiary. He was paroled in 1929.

Owners to Continue Fight.

No further moves toward peace were made yesterday by the Allied Independent Theater Owners association and the operators who were locked out more than six weeks ago. There was an all day meeting of the owners, but it was asserted they had determined to carry on their fight to a finish.

Some of the owners said that a new fund of $50,000 for the fight was being raised and that they would continue to employ nonunion operators imported from New York.

Mayor Cermak yesterday expressed himself as dissatisfied with the failure of all peace negotiations. He was known to have formed a plan to call in the managers of the large theaters which are carrying on with the union and demand that they take a hand in getting a settlement.

Two small theaters were bombed yesterday, the Byrd at 4726 West Madison street and the Lindy at 3427 Ogden avenue. Both employ union operators.

LEAGUE, ALL BUT JAPAN, CHEERS AS U. S. SITS IN Too Big 'Glad Hand' Annoys Leaders.

U. S. Action Limited

The American state department in authorizing Prentiss B. Gilbert yesterday to take a seat in the league of nations council's discussion of the Manchurian dispute emphasized that American co-operation will be limited to steps designed to mobilize world public opinion against warfare between Japan and China. There will be no co-operation in any other form of persuasion or co-operation which the league may decide to employ.

BY EGBERT SWENSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Oct. 16.—The United States took a seat at the table of the league of nations council tonight in the person of Prentiss B. Gilbert, American consul at Geneva, following America's cabled acceptance of the council's invitation, which Japan fought to the end. His formal entry at the heels of a liveried league attendant precipitated an unscheduled love feast which, before it was over, proved embarrassing to the moguls of the league.

Everybody welcomed the American delegate with the conspicuous exception of Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japanese delegate, and Mad. Birger Braadlan, foreign minister of Norway. It had been arranged by Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, and other leaders of the council, who were desirous of avoiding such conspicuous abstinence by Japan, that Briand and a couple of others representing small countries were to speak pieces of welcome. But the program went wrong.

Everybody Wants to Speak.

The actual presence of the United States at the horseshoe council table after all these years of aloofness from the league was too much for these members not scheduled to speak. One after the other the representatives of Peru, Panama, Poland, Jugo-Slavia, and the rest signaled Chairman Briand for permission to testify their pleasure at America's presence. One after the other they were given permission, with increasingly wry grimaces by the grizzled Frenchman. The speechmaking grew and so did the tension of the league officials.

But Norway saved the day. Her delegate deliberately refrained from welcoming the United States delegats. It was explained later that Norway felt its friendliness toward the United States could not be questioned, and that if Braadlan failed to speak it would not be misinterpreted. And thus Japan would not be left isolated in refraining from welcoming the American.

Yoshizawa Shakes Hands.

Yoshizawa retrieved himself personally after the meeting by seeking out Gilbert and shaking hands warmly. He abandoned his usual oriental inscrutability in favor of a broad, friendly smile.

Mr. Gilbert, in a speech to the council, emphasized that he was sitting in at the council's deliberations only under the terms of the Kellogg pact outlawing war. He said he would not take part in duscussions or measures decided on under the league covenant.

While no program for tomorrow's deliberations was issued tonight, it is understood that the "big five," France, Britain, Italy, Germany, and Spain, will meet in secret session with Gilbert, thus making it the "big six."

Statement to League.

The statement made by Mr. Gilbert follows:

"In this moment of deep international concern I thank you for your invitation to sit in your deliberations and to participate in your discussions in so far as the pact of Paris, to which my country is a party, is concerned.

"The government of the United States of America has been following with the closest attention the proceedings before the council for the settlement of the dispute at present unhappily existing between China and Japan. My government does not seek to intrude with respect to such measures as you may propose under the covenant of the league of nations; and is not in a position to participate with the members of the council in the formulation of any action envisaged under that instrument, for the composing of differences existing between two of its members.

"It has already conveyed to you its sympathetic appreciation of your ef-

Paris, and its wholehearted accord with the objective you have in view; and it has expressed the hope that the tried machinery of the league may in the case, as on previous occasions, be successful in bringing this dispute to a conclusion satisfactory to both parties. Moreover, acting independently and through diplomatic channels, my government has already signified its moral support of your efforts in this capacity to bring about a peaceful solution of the unfortunate controversy in Manchuria.

Cannot Participate with League.

"In your deliberations as to the application of the machinery of the covenant of the league of nations, I repeat, we can of course take no part. But the pact of Paris, bearing as it does the signature of the president of the meeting together with that of our former secretary of state as joint proponents, represents to this extent in America an effective means of marshaling the public opinion of the world behind the use of pacific means only, in the solution of the controversies between nations. We feel not only that this public opinion is a most potent force in the domestic affairs of every nation, but that it is of constantly growing importance and influence in the mutual relations of the members of the family of nations.

"The timely exercise of the power of such opinion may be effective to prevent a breach of international peace of world-wide consequences. We assume that this may be the reason why the consideration of the relationship between the provisions of the pact of Paris and the present situation has been brought forward in this body; and the purpose which has moved my government to accept your invitation is that thus we may most enthusiastically and effectively take common counsel with you on this subject."

Instructions to Gilbert.

"You are authorized to participate in the discussions of the council when they relate to the possible application of the Kellogg-Briand pact, to which treaty the United States is a party. You are expected to report the result of such discussions to the department for its determination as to possible action. If you are present at the discussion of any other aspect of the Chinese-Japanese dispute it must be only as an observer and auditor."

U. S. CALLED MEDDLESOME

TOKIO, Oct. 17 [Saturday].—[A.T.]—The Rengo News agency today carried a statement from army authorities characterizing America's attitude on the Manchurian situation as "extremely meddlesome."

The statement said army authorities explained that the government has repeatedly stated the recent difficulties in Manchuria should be settled directly between Japan and China without the intervention of a third party.

Therefore, the statement continued, "it is extremely meddlesome on the part of the United States to concern herself with a serious issue arising in the region where Japan has special, peculiar relations. Such a step would only irritate the sensitive feelings of the Japanese people, who are particularly susceptible regarding Manchuria."

Action Causes Great Concern.

Receipt of dispatches this morning saying the council of the league of nations had overridden Japan's opposition to the participation of an American representative in the council's discussion of the Manchurian question caused great concern among officials. Although today was a national holiday, the war department and foreign office forces worked on full schedules.

Reports of pending actions were numerous. One said the government was considering sending another set of instructions to Kenkichi Yoshisawa, Japanese spokesman at Geneva, owing to the latest developments.

Military authorities at a joint conference were reported to have voted to uphold Japan's position in objecting to having an American representative at the league council table, and the Rengo News agency said that, "as far as the army is concerned, secession from the league, if necessary, would be quite in order."

Charges China Is Favored.

In this connection a foreign office spokesman asserted there was a feeling in government circles that China had repeatedly been favored at Geneva and that if this attitude continued Tokio's sentiment toward the league was bound to change.

He declared that "Japan has absolutely no intention of declaring war upon China." Japan's attitude, he said, was in no way directed at America itself, and he reiterated the contention that the Kellogg pact applied to a situation involving war or danger of war. He added that Japan believed American participation in the Geneva conference might only delay a solution by encouraging China to refuse to enter into direct negotiations.

Meanwhile Gen. Giro Minami, minister of war, invited representatives of the vernacular newspapers to meet with him at noon, in view of "the gravity of the situation," apparently referring to the action at Geneva in overriding Japan's objections.

U. S. Makes Position Plain in Entering League Parley

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—A representative of the United States today took his seat in the council of the league of nations considering the Manchurian crisis, but at the same time this representative, Prentiss Gilbert, American consular representative at Geneva, made it plain that the United States was there solely to lend moral support to the league's effort to prevent warfare between China and Japan.

American coöperation will be limited to steps designed to mobilize world public opinion against such a conflict, state department officials disclosed here. There will be no coöperation in any other form of persuasion or coöperation which the league may decide to employ.

U. S. Bars Sanctions.

Under no conditions, it was said, will the United States coöperate with the league in the application of sanctions provided in the league covenant, which authorizes the use of an economic blockade or armed forces to prevent hostilities between league powers.

The state department's position is that the United States, by working with the league council in the present crisis in Manchuria, is following the course best designed to mobilize world public opinion simultaneously against war in the orient. The state department is desirous that the league council urge all world powers to express their disapproval of violation of the Kellogg pact which might lead to a declaration of war.

Gilbert Gets Instructions.

Mr. Gilbert's instructions authorized him to participate in the discussions of the council only when they related to the possible application of the Kellogg-Briand pact.

"You are expected," Mr. Stimson's instructions read, "to report the result of such discussions to the department for its determination as to possible action. If you are present at the discussion of any other aspect of the Chinese-Japanese dispute it must be only as an observer and auditor."

Notwithstanding this country's limited participation in the league's deliberations, apprehension was aroused in congressional circles. The question was raised immediately as to whether this country would be able to divorce itself utterly from future action by the league in this crisis—if that body went so far as to urge an economic blockade against Japan. With resentment against the United States already high in Japan as the result of American pacific efforts, speculation was aroused as to the possible effect on American-Japanese relations of a league move to force Japan out of Manchuria, even if the state department declined to join openly in such a step.

Japan May Seize Pretext.

In some quarters the view was expressed that American participation in the league sessions may be seized upon by Japan as an excuse for ignoring whatever action the league-United States conferees may take. It was pointed out in this connection that as Japan already has declared American participation illegal it is possible the Japanese government would go a step further and declare illegal any action taken.

The action of the Hoover administration in authorizing Mr. Gilbert to sit with the council marked a high water mark in American coöperation with the league. It also immediately raised the question in political circles as to whether the United States was not now, for all practical purposes, in the league. Another point raised was that of whether the state department virtually welded the Kellogg peace pact to the league of nations. By coöperation with the league in a move to make the pact effective it is held in some quarters that the Hoover administration has tacitly taken the position that the machinery of the league is necessary to bring the pact into action.

CHINESE TROOPS AMBUSHED; MANY SLAIN IN BATTLE

Rival Army Opens Fire as It Advances Into City.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

DAIREN, Oct. 16.—Telegraph and telephone communications from Tsitsihar, northwest of Harbin, along the Chinese Eastern railway, were cut off this morning due to severe fighting between Chinese factions for possession of the city.

Chang Hai-peng's troops approached Tsitsihar late yesterday afternoon, expecting peacefully to occupy the city on behalf of the Manchurian independence movement, when troops loyal to Chang Hsueh-liang, governor of Manchuria, unexpectedly attacked. Gen. Ma Chan-shan, acting governor, had promised to surrender the city peacefully, but when Chang's soldiers were about to enter the walled city Gen. Ma launched a surprise attack. Vast numbers of Chinese, Japanese and Koreans are fleeing to Harbin.

Report Many Casualties.

The casualties on both sides were reported large, but no details have been received. General Ma was reported to have lost the battle and is now retreating, strongly pressed by Chang. Gen. Ma is expecting reinforcements from Hailar.

The Japanese have unconfirmed reports to indicate that Chang is receiving soviet support, but this is not verified. Nevertheless, twenty soviet military trains are reported in readiness on the Siberian border at Manchuli and a portion of the Heilungkiang armies loyal to Chang Hsueh-liang are now proceeding westward from Hailar in a forlorn hope to repel an expected Russian invasion of the Chinese Eastern railway zone.

Japanese Troops Move South.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Oct. 17.—[Saturday.]—Japanese armored trains, continuing their progress south on the Peiping-Mukden railway, have reached Kowpangtze, less than 40 miles from Chinchow, while additional Japanese war equipment has been landed at Shanhaikwan, near the great wall.

GANG KILLS ONE, BEATS ANOTHER IN NIGHT ATTACK

Fleomino Montigo, 28 years old, 921 South Ashland avenue, was shot to death and his roommate, Adrian Elanparo, 22 years old, was beaten by a gang of hoodlums while they were on their way home from work late last night.

Both men, Filipinos, left a street car at Ashland avenue and Taylor street. As they reached Marshfield avenue they were beaten by half a dozen men. Elanparo was knocked unconscious with a club. Montigo fled. He is employed at the Speedway hospital and is studying medicine.

Apparently Montigo was followed by his assailants and was shot in the right side by one of the gang as he reached his home, and the police found him dead.

NO TIME TO REDUCE NAVY, BRITTEN SAYS; WILL FIGHT SLASHES

Washington, D. C., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—With the Manchurian crisis threatening a situation in which it might be necessary to protect American commerce in the Orient, now is no time to cut down the American navy, Representative Fred A. Britten [Rep., Ill.] declared today.

"World depression coupled with the Chinese-Japanese clash in Manchuria has created a political tension that may break out in any one of several directions and put the entire globe in the precarious position occupied in 1914," Representative Britten said. "This certainly is no time to tinker with the first arm of the national defense and I shall oppose in every practical way the serious curtailments which are being suggested for the navy."

HELP CHILDREN, LET DOGS WAIT, CERMAK'S VIEW

Mayor Cermak yesterday replied to the women foes of vivisection who appeared on Thursday before the judiciary committee of the city council to protest with tears the treatment accorded dogs in the new city pound.

"I'm in favor of treating dogs humanely, but I'll shed my tears for the kids," the mayor said. "I only wish that all of them could be taken care of as well as dogs are at the pound. I wonder how many children have porcelain bathtubs and exercise rooms. If I'd been mayor I could have found a better use for that $80,000 they put into the new pound.

"Here our policemen and firemen are without salaries, and these women are worrying about dogs. They want a veterinarian there. The police have one for their horses, and he visits the pound now. As for prohibiting vivisection, I'd rather have them experiment on dogs than on children."

POOR BESIEGING SCHOOL FOR FOOD AND CLOTHING

Principal Begs Help to Alleviate Want.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Down in the ghetto area around Maxwell street destitution has closed in like a plague. Home after home has fallen a victim to the depression and disease has followed in the natural course of events. Disease, doctors advise, whose traces never can be removed by adequate care in after life. Disease whose ravages on child health today still will be apparent when the juveniles of the present have become the men and women of tomorrow.

The Foster school at 720 O'Brien street is offering much needed help to these afflicted people. Miss Isabel Annan, its youthful, capable, and kind hearted principal, is besieged on every side for food, clothing, and shelter for her students and their elders. Whether she will or no—and she emphatically will not—the welfare work that cries aloud to be done is encroaching on the educational activities of the school. Miss Annan and other principals face the inevitable squarely.

Principal Asks Help.

"Before a child can learn he must eat," she says. "We're doing what we can to get them clothed and fed—but the task is so mountainous, and what we can do so very little. We need help. So terribly that I simply can't express it.

"Yes, I can too!" she exclaimed. "Nothing could tell the whole awful story better than to say that almost half the children in Foster school belong to families whose main means of existence is by picking up the discarded fruit and vegetables around Maxwell, South Water and Randolph street markets.

"That's why there are at least forty serious cases of rickets among the children here. That's why we distribute as much cod liver oil and milk as we can possibly accumulate for them. That's why we see youngsters waiting around at the door of the lunchroom each noon, wistful but afraid, hoping to get some food. We limit it to fifteen for free meals this week."

Holes in Boy's Shoes.

Alvin, a colored girl of 11, brought in a small Mexican lad in tattered rompers for Miss Annan's inspection. Both bare toes were visible through holes in his shoes. Miss Annan smiled.

"I see," she said. "Plain to be seen what's wrong there. That's the fourth pair of shoes I've had applications for. You go on back to class, Jose. And Alvin, tell us what you had for lunch today."

Alvin hung her head and mumbled: "I don't have any."

"What? Why, I told you to go every day and get lunch," Miss Annan protested. "Why didn't you?"

"Any number of children are like that," commented the principal. "We never know they're hungry, because they don't say anything. Alvin and her brother, Ernest, 13 years old, and their baby sister are staying with an uncle and aunt.

"They had been living off the county, and when their mother left had only a bit of oatmeal to eat. They boiled it up and fed it to Jessie, the baby, and they went without eating. Food is terribly scarce in the place they're staying now. But it's amazing to see how these youngsters love that baby."

Alvin and Ernest and thousands of others like them will receive help from the Hungry School Children's fund opened by THE TRIBUNE to continue the work the teachers could not afford any longer, since they have not been paid for months.

Scores of meals for other hungry boys and girls will be made possible through the efforts of Shirley Barancik and Louane Sutton, both 9 years old, who sent in $8.98 yesterday. Shirley and Louane were so touched by the accounts of children in need that they picked and sold flowers one day, and on another opened a miniature bakery, which raised the donation they sent.

Friends of Music, a north side organization, sent $10 with the assurance that the gift would be repeated for five months. Similar pledges will help to swell the fund in ensuing weeks.

Gifts may be mailed to the cashier of THE TRIBUNE, with the coupon accompanying this.

EDISON FAMILY BY BEDSIDE AS COMA PERSISTS

For First Time Physician Remains for Night.

West Orange, N. J., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—Thomas Alva Edison's long struggle for life appears fast drawing to its close. This evening, with his entire family and his personal physician in close attendance upon him the 84 year old inventor lay in a comatose state in his sickroom at Glenmore, the Edison estate in Llewellyn Park here.

Dr. Howe's 10 p. m. bulletin read: "The indications at present are that Mr. Edison will have a quiet night. As far as can be told there will be no emergency during the night. His condition continues about the same as reported two hours ago."

Although his appearance is that of a man enjoying quiet, normal slumber, Mr. Edison has not roused from coma in two days and Dr. Hubert S. Howe, who has been closely watching him ever since his collapse in early August, does not expect him to do so.

Charles Edison, son of the inventor, said this evening that the family realizes that "the end is near" and indicated that the strain of the long vigil was causing some anxiety for his mother. It was as much for her sake as for that of the sick man that Dr. Howe is remaining at the Edison home tonight, he said.

Indications that Mr. Edison's circulation is beginning to fail were noted by Dr. Howe in a bulletin which he issued shortly after 8 o'clock this evening. On the other hand, some improvement was noted during the day in the quality of his pulse, Dr. Howe observed, and the net change in his distinguished patient's condition was slight.

Earlier in the day Dr. Howe had explained that the extent of the coma into which Mr. Edison has fallen has not been determined, since no effort has been made to stir him from it. It is now eleven days since the sick man has taken any fluids and his most recent nourishment was few spoonfuls of stewed pears on Sunday.

William L. Edison and his wife, son and daughter-in-law of the sick man, arrived this afternoon from their home in Wilmington, Del., and early this evening Mrs. Marian Oser, a daughter, came on to West Orange from New York, where she had been staying recently.

VOTE TO INDICT TILTON, 4 OTHERS IN CANCER 'CURE'

Report Physicians Named in True Bill.

The grand jury is reported to have voted true bills yesterday against Old Doc Lester Tilton, self-styled cancer healer of Clinton, Ia., and four men alleged to have been associated with his various Chicago cancer clinics. The charge is conspiracy to operate a confidence game, a felony punishable by one to five years' imprisonment.

Reported named with Tilton were two licensed physicians, Dr. Joseph Duffy, 5755 North Clark street, and Dr. Otto Holinger, 4632 North Rockwell street, as well as two professional promoters, Harry De Joannis, 4049 North Ridge avenue, and James Madison Price, present address unknown. Dr. Duffy and Dr. Holinger have been members in good standing of the American, Illinois and Chicago medical societies.

Work on Case 4 Months.

The case, which has been in preparation four months, was presented to the grand jury by Assistant State's Attorneys Charles A. Bellows and Edwin Spivo on evidence procured by J. E. Edwards, chief inspector of the state department of registration and education. Two true bills are said to have been voted, the first naming all five defendants on six conspiracy counts and the second charging Tilton with violating the medical practices act to obtain money under false pretenses.

Tilton is already facing trial before Municipal Judge Thomas A. Green for practicing medicine without a license, a misdemeanor. He was arrested on June 14 by Inspector Monahan at Fulton, Ill., just across the Mississippi from Clinton, Ia., on a farm containing peat bogs, from which he distilled ingredients for his cancer cure.

Swanson Seeks Test Case.

Upon his being jailed in Chicago, Chief Inspector Edwards urged that the case be presented immediately to the grand jury for indictment on a felony. State's Attorney Swanson vetoed the proposal, deciding to make a test case first by trying him on the misdemeanor. This case has been hanging fire since June and is now scheduled for trial Oct. 28.

In the interval Mr. Edwards issued citations against six physicians, including Dr. Duffy and Dr. Holinger, compelling them to show cause why their licenses should not be revoked for associating with a quack.

KELLOGG DELAYS NEW MACHINERY DISPLACING JOBS

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 16.—(AP)—W. K. Kellogg, chairman of the board of directors and president of the Kellogg company, today said he had ordered company executives to delay installation of a new invention that would eliminate many jobs in the plant.

The device, he said, is a packing machine that would replace four of the five girls working on each packing line in the plant, thus eliminating more than 100 jobs.

Mr. Kellogg said that while he felt the machine would eventually increase the number of employés, it would temporarily decrease the force if installed at the present time.

TO GET DIVORCE

ANN CANNON REYNOLDS.
[Acme Photo.]

Reno, Nev., Oct. 16.—(AP)—Ann Cannon Reynolds has taken up residence on a dude ranch near Reno for the purpose of obtaining a divorce from her wealthy 19 year old husband, Smith Reynolds, son of the late tobacco magnate.

Mrs. Reynolds arrived here Oct. 5, and, it was learned today, was accompanied by her husband, who, after seeing that she was comfortably settled and details of her divorce arranged, returned to their southern home.

Reynolds was only 17 and Ann Cannon 19 when they married at York, S. C., on Nov. 16, 1929. They have a year old daughter.

While details of a property settlement were not revealed, it was indicated Mrs. Reynolds will receive a small monthly allowance which will be increased several years hence when her husband comes into his full share of the estates of his father and mother. Under the terms of their wills, Reynolds will receive $50,000 annually from his mother's estate after he is 25 and considerably more than that from his father's estate when he attains the age of 28 years.

WARNS AGAINST FAKE CHARITIES OF RACKETEERS

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Conkey, commissioner of public welfare, yesterday informed the city council's committee on unemployment that racketeers are taking advantage of the depression to operate a number of "charity" events.

"Some of these people," he said, "spend just enough of the money collected to make their acts legal. An ordinance providing for the issuance of a permit by the public welfare department should be passed by the council. The department then would be able to proceed against the racketeers."

The committee ordered a resolution drafted for submission to the council requesting the bankers to buy tax anticipation warrants or to let bankers outside of the city buy them after Ald. Oscar F. Nelson [46th] charged that the local bankers are responsible for the refusal of outside bankers to buy.

WOLF TO FIGHT PRISON; WIFE SAYS HE'S DUPE

Lawyer Will Ask Court to Set Aside Sentence.

A legal battle to save Walter Wolf from the ten to one hundred year prison sentence imposed on him as a result of his plea of guilty to embezzling $3,666,929 from the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, will be launched on Monday before Chief Justice Harry M. Fisher in Criminal court.

Attorney Louis Piquett, retained by Wolf's wife, Esther, to defend the former manager of the Continental bank's coupon department, announced yesterday after a conference with the prisoner in the county jail that on Monday he would present to Judge Fisher a motion to stay the mittimus committing Wolf to the penitentiary and another to set aside the sentence.

Should the court grant these motions, the case would be returned to the status it held prior to Oct. 9, when Wolf pleaded guilty. If the motions are denied Attorney Piquett indicated he would appeal.

Piquett Charges Injustice.

"An injustice has been done my client somewhere along the line," the lawyer asserted upon emerging from Wolf's cell. "In the first place he told me that he had been assured he would get no more than 1 to 10 years if he pleaded guilty.

"He made other revelations implicating several important people. In justice to these people, I cannot reveal their names until I have investigated Wolf's story. I can say that no important officers of the bank are involved."

Wolf's wife, a striking brunette with flashing brown eyes, accompanied Attorney Piquett to her husband's cell. In the first interview she has given since Wolf confessed his embezzlement six weeks ago, the wife asserted her belief that her husband had been "duped."

"My husband never spent any of the money he is accused of stealing," she declared. "We always lived within his income of $75 a week. I want to do everything under the sun to help him now. He has been wronged."

Deny Promise of Consideration.

Denials that Wolf had been promised any consideration for his plea of guilty were issued by James H. Leavell, president of the Continental bank, and by Assistant State's Attorney Henry E. Ayers, who prosecuted the case. Mr. Ayers announced that he would oppose the motion to set aside the sentence and State's Attorney Swanson declared he would appear in court to back up his assistant.

"Wolf, in his confession, in his sworn testimony before the grand jury and in his testimony before the chief justice, insisted that no one connected with the bank had any knowledge of or connection with his embezzlements," Mr. Leavell said. "In addition a very careful and thorough investigation has failed to disclose that any one connected with the bank was in any way implicated.

"That Wolf had conspirators outside the bank has always seemed clear to us. Indeed, indictments have already been returned in one instance.

"No one in any way connected with the bank has at any time had any understanding or made any promise in regard to Wolf's punishment. That matter rested solely with the court and the state's attorney."

That Judge Fisher would grant Wolf's plea for setting aside the sentence was deemed improbable by observers of the case, who recalled the excoriation the judge gave the prisoner upon his plea of guilty. The only embarrassment likely to accrue from Wolf's change of attitude, it was said, would be with reference to the prosecution of David D. Weiss, tailor-broker, who has been indicted as Wolf's accomplice.

JAPANESE SHIP WITH 40 ABOARD BELIEVED LOST

Lindberghs on Liner Hunting Survivors.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 18.—(AP)—A deckload of lumber carried by a Japanese freighter Tonan, reported sinking in the stormy north Pacific early today, was found by the Dollar liner President Jefferson, cruising in the vicinity, late this afternoon.

In a message to the Mackay radio station here, the Dollar liner said:

"Found deck load, but nothing else. Combed vicinity three hours in company with Ayaha Maru and Taigen Maru, but no ships found trace of anything except logs from Tonan Maru deck load."

The Japanese freighter carried a crew of from forty to fifty men. The rescue ships proceeded immediately to the position given when the freighter sent its first S O S, but the search was abandoned because of poor visibility due to rain and high seas.

Lindberghs Aboard Jefferson.

The Jefferson, whose passengers included Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, was continuing the search, as were the two other ships, in the hope some of the crew may have escaped in lifeboats.

The Tonan was carrying a lumber cargo to Shanghai, having left Portland, Ore., Sept. 30. The ship indicated earlier it had lost the deck load.

"We are now sinking. Come quickly," the 7,154 ton freighter radioed shortly before 6 a. m. No further messages were intercepted as far as coast radio stations could learn late today.

"Our stern deck is same horizon west east. Now we want quick come," was a message intercepted a little after 4 a. m.

Adrift in Fog Belt.

The position the Japanese ship gave was latitude 50:24 north, longitude 178:30 east, in the world's worst fog belt south of the western Aleutian islands. The President Jefferson, bound for Puget sound, was some four hundred miles distant when the first call for help was received, and its course was changed for the race to the rescue.

The Tonan is 415 feet long and is one of a fleet of five ships built 12 years ago for the trans-Pacific trade. It is under the management of the Nippon Yusen Kabushiki Kaisha of Kobe, Japan.

Half fares for children from 3 to 12 years of age and free passage for children in arms will go into effect tomorrow on Century Air lines. Century officials estimated that 11 per cent of the 40,213 passengers carried on the system in the last six months were 12 years or younger.

During the six months from April 1 to Oct. 1 Century Air lines carried 14,128 passengers, or 21.3 per cent of the 66,302 total carried by sixteen air lines operating in and out of Chicago airport, according to A. R. Bone Jr., general traffic manager.

Approximately 16,500,000 letters, or 205 tons of air mail, were carried on the New York-Chicago-Pacific coast route of United Air lines last month. The volume was 40 per cent of all air mail carried in the United States. The line carried 6,179 passengers on the 2,766 mile route.

Third quarter operations of United Air lines included 3,032,260 miles flown, 17,980 revenue passengers carried and 618 tons of air mail carried. Passengers, mail, express, and mileage showed increases over the previous quarter, and larger increases over the same period last year. In September, 965,782 miles were flown, 410,017 pounds of mail carried, and 5,507 revenue passengers carried.

A bill for an accounting was filed yesterday in the Circuit court in behalf of 12 minority stockholders of the Continental Aircraft and Transport company, 5032 West 63d street. The bill, filed by Attorney Louis P. Miller, alleges that stock held by the plaintiffs was misapplied in connection with the management of the company and its subsidiary, the Hi-Lo Fan corporation. Capital stock of $2,000,000 was listed. The majority stockholders were given as the Herman Leinweber estate and Victor H., William H., and Curtis H. Leinweber.

NEW GAS GOES INTO HOMES OF CHICAGO TODAY

Fuel Turned On in City; Suburbs Get It Soon.

Scorched eggs and wheat cakes will be the fare of Chicago husbands this morning if their wives are neglectful of their cooking and read the morning paper or listen to the radio instead of keeping a watchful eye on the gas stove. Flames from gas burners will be nearly twice as hot as they were yesterday, due to the beginning of service with a mixture of natural and artificial gas.

Two advantages accompany the new gas. With a heat content of 800 British thermal units as compared to 530 B. T. U. in the old gas the mixture will cook more rapidly. Gas bills will show a saving to home owners at the end of the month, with a reduction of 6½ per cent for domestic use and 31 per cent in gas used for heating.

The new mixture was turned into the mains of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company last night and this morning the new gas is being supplied to 97 per cent of the users in Chicago.

The new reduced rates were fixed by the Illinois commerce commission and are temporary. Hearings on rates will be resumed the last of the month if consumers or the company show them to be unfair. The commerce commission last year ruled to permit the gas company to charge consumers on a heat basis instead of a cubic content rating. The change was necessitated by the increase in the heat content with the natural gas.

The Public Service Company of Northern Illinois expects to start distribution of the new fuel in the suburbs today. Engineering problems have held up the new service. Tentative plans call for starting the mixture into the south section of Oak Park and into Cicero, Berwyn, Forest Park, and Riverside today. Tomorrow the northern part of Oak Park and River Forest will receive the service.

Northern suburbs are scheduled to be cut in on Wednesday and by next Saturday all of the suburban burners adjusted for the mixture will have been cut in. A month or six weeks will be required before all burners will be adjusted so that the entire Chicago area may receive the new mixture.

MRS. MORROW WON'T TAKE APPOINTMENT TO HUSBAND'S PLACE

$161,076 GIVEN TO RELIEF FUND IN SINGLE DAY

Golf Clubs Aid Drive by Special Meets.

Swelled by a single day's contributions of $161,076, the joint emergency relief fund raised to care for the poor and unemployed this winter yesterday passed the million and a half mark and stood at $1,513,505.

This sum does not include any contributions from the division which is expected to bring in the greatest share of the $8,500,000 needed, the force of 1,200 who are seeking funds from trades, industries and the professions. This group will report for the first time next Tuesday.

Special Gifts Division.

The major part of yesterday's contributions were obtained by John Stuart's division of the special gifts division, organized under the direction of Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago.

Robert A. Gardner	14,200
John A. Holabird	9,200
Douglas Stuart	33,000
John F. Wilson	22,600
Total	$88,650

Added to this amount was $2,426 received by J. Russell Forgan, chairman of the benefits division, from special golf tournaments staged at seven country clubs, and a gift of $70,000 from Harold F. McCormick.

"The teams are working hard, and we expect them to finish their task within the next two weeks," said President Hutchins. "We believe that those who can afford to give large amounts are realizing their responsibility and that we will have many more large gifts to announce within a few days.

Finds Wealthy Doing Their Share.

"I am sure that employés who are being asked to contribute one day's pay a month for six months through the trades, industries and professions division, realize that the well to do citizens of Chicago are doing their share and that this campaign will be a success because all classes are contributing whatever they can to take care of those who are in distress."

The golf clubs which conducted special tournaments for the benefit of the fund, and the sums they have donated are as follows:

Butterfield Country club	$ 500
Calumet Country club	100
Hinsdale Golf club	550.55
Edgewater Golf club	740
Glenenglen Country club	75
Bryn Mawr Country club	200
Chicago Golf club	260.67
Total	$2,426.22

More than 30 other clubs will stage tournaments over the week-end in the fund's behalf. C. A. Nash, president of the Chicago Daily Fee Golf association, indicated yesterday that the 13 courses represented in his group will also have a big purse to hand over to the relief fund.

Special sweepstake events have been held at the various public fee courses under his jurisdiction during the last fortnight, with a free membership for 1932 offered to the winner of the charity match at each club. Leslie Gordon is chairman of the golf benefits division of the relief committee.

Bankruptcy Suit Is Filed Against Joliet Trade Group

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against the Joliet chamber of commerce in the United States District court yesterday in Chicago. According to the petition, which was filed by Attorney Robert E. Higgins of Joliet, a $5,000 judgment has been entered against the chamber in the Will county court and a levy has been made on its real estate. The petition was filed in behalf of three creditors who have claims aggregating $500.

BRUENING TO RULE AS A DICTATOR; WINS CONFIDENCE

Reichstag O. K.'s Cabinet and Then Adjourns.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 16.—Germany tonight is under a dictatorship with Dr. Heinrich Bruening playing the rôle of the iron fisted chancellor. The mild looking Herr Bruening became the virtual dictator of the country today when the reichstag gave him a vote of confidence and then adjourned until Feb. 23.

The vote of confidence Chancellor Bruening's new cabinet received even surpassed the anticipation of the chancellor himself. It was 295 to 270. Adolf Hitler's National Socialists and Dr. Alfred Hugenberg's Nationalists did their best to defeat the government and were even assisted in their efforts by their mutual hated enemy, the communists.

Opposition Walks Out.

The radicals thereupon asked for the dissolution of the reichstag. This was rejected by a majority of 68 votes. Still undaunted, they attempted to exploit the unpopularity of the chancellor's emergency decrees, but Bruening emerged victorious by a majority of 103 votes.

Disgusted with the turn of events, the Fascists and Nationalists walked out of the reichstag.

"We will return only when there exists the possibility of preventing specially wicked measures directed against our people," Wilhelm Frick, Hitler's henchman, announced.

"It's a confession of defeat," cried Bruening's supporters as the opposition rose from its seats and filed out.

The reichstag's adjournment until next February clears the way for Chancellor Bruening to launch his campaign "to lift Germany out of the rut" without any parliamentary interference.

The chancellor announced that the government would study the proposal of devoting money intended for the construction of "pocket cruisers" to the feeding of poor children during the winter after the reichstag had accepted this motion by a Socialist member.

Chancellor Bruening, in defending his régime, stated:

"In the first years after the war we paid reparations by borrowing funds from abroad. When my first cabinet came into power we started paying reparations out of Germany's earnings. As matters stand today, Germany can pay the sums prescribed in the treaties only by borrowing abroad or by exporting vast amounts of goods.

"The world is not ready to absorb our exports and until then we must continue on the road we started and sincerely try to fulfill our agreements. For a few more months Germany must forget her internal quarrels."

U. S. LOOKS INTO $1,000,000 DEALS OF WALKER AID

New York, Oct. 16.—[Special.]—The federal government, it was learned today, has the $1,000,000 business transactions of Russell T. Sherwood, financial and business agent for Mayor James J. Walker, under investigation. The inquiry was spurred by facts uncovered by accountants for the Hofstadter legislative committee who have been looking into Sherwood's affairs for some time.

Sherwood has been missing from this jurisdiction since last August and the mayor had been publicly taxed by Samuel Seabury, counsel to the Hofstadter committee, with responsibility for his absence.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 16.—Russell Sherwood, missing financial secretary of Mayor James Walker of New York, has been registered at the Hotel Ritz here for a week with a new bride. He refused to see the press, but when called over the telephone he said:

"I'm here on my honeymoon. As for the newspaper stories, I have nothing to say. My business here is my own."

HOOVER SEEKING PUBLIC SUPPORT OF BUDGET CUTS

Naval Reductions Said to Point the Way.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—President Hoover today called for public support of a fiscal program limiting federal expenditures to the "last cent consonant with the obligations of the government."

In a public statement calling attention to the fact that the navy department had submitted a report calling for drastic economies during the 1933 year, President Hoover said that all the principal officers of the government were coöperating in similar reductions.

No definite figures outlining the exact size of the economies asked by President Hoover of his official family have been published. In the event other departments make proportionate cuts to those demanded of the navy department, the 1933 budget estimates submitted to the White House by cabinet officers and heads of departments will be reduced by in excess of 200 millions. As submitted a few days ago, the estimates for 1933 were 300 millions above contemplated expenditures for the current year.

Issue Taken to Country.

In many quarters the President's statement was interpreted as fulfilling, at least in part, his recent threat to take to the country the issues between himself and navy admirals, over the extent of economy reductions demanded of the navy department. Those taking this view point to the President's known dissatisfaction with the opposition that has developed in navy and congressional circles to his program for slashing naval expenditures during 1933 by $61,000,000.

As disclosed yesterday, the navy economy program, as worked out in compliance with White House instructions, calls for slashes in commissioned warships, personnel, and the naval establishment ashore. Economies recommended called for cutting the navy budget estimated for 1933 by approximately $52,000,000, bringing the budget figure for the navy down to 345 millions, a decrease of $41,000,000 below expenditure for the current year, now expected to run somewhat above 390 millions.

Hint Political Opposition.

In his statement today the President did not specifically mention navy and congressional opposition to naval cuts in calling for the support of public opinion. Whether the President was asking national support for a program to close political navy yards, as recommended by the navy, was not made clear. Much political opposition to the shore station economy program recommended by the navy was expressed today.

The President stressed the difficulties encountered in effecting economies, asserting that special interests continued to urge increased expenditures for pet projects, notwithstanding the leanness of the national revenues.

President's Statement.

The President said in his pronouncement:

"I have received the proposals of the high officials of the navy of plans for reduction of expenditures. They are being considered in the full light of maintained efficiency of the department. Such studies and revisions are equally in progress in every other department of the government. The proposals of all the departments will require study and consideration. No conclusions have been reached on any particular proposed expenditure or economy. Final decision will not be reached until the final budget is presented to congress.

"All of the principal officers of the government are coöperating to bring about reductions. In times when the income of the people is reduced and when taxes or loans may stifle economic recovery there is only one course of sound fiscal policy, and that is to reduce the expenditure of the government to the last cent consonant with the obligations of the government."

Sees Efficiency Impaired.

It became known today that Secretary of the Navy Adams, in submitting his program for naval slashes, called attention of President Hoover to the fact that adoption of such a drastic reduction would seriously impair the efficiency of the navy for years to come. According to authoritative information the naval secretary left a letter with Mr. Hoover pointing out that if the economies are insisted upon the combat strength of the fleet would be weakened seriously.

The secretary called attention to the fact that this reduction together with others preceding it will cut the navy's backbone, or battleship strength, down to about 70 per cent of what it was in 1930.

HUSBAND SHOOTS OTHER MAN AND TWO BYSTANDERS

He opened fire immediately. When police arrived from the North Racine avenue station, a block away, they found the suitor, Peter Tachigan, 38 years old, 820 North avenue, and two bystanders lying wounded on the sidewalk. The wounded bystanders are Miss Mary Glowacka, 17 years old, 621 North Racine avenue, and Alfred Vitacco, 13, of 1216 Erie street. Tachigan had been shot in the abdomen and Miss Glowacka in the mouth. Both were taken to the county hospital in a serious condition. Young Vitacco was wounded in the left wrist.

The police started a search for the cuckolding husband, Jack Pabougan, 58 years old, of 704 North Ogden avenue. He is a hot dog vendor. Detectives learned that his wife, Dorothy, 30 years old, had left him two weeks ago and joined Tachigan.

SEES AVIATION LEADING NATION TO GOOD TIMES

Air Lines Official Points to Gains.

BY HUGH SEXTON.

Aviation has gone forward steadily during the last eighteen months while general business has slackened, Col. Halsey Dunwoody, vice president of American Airways, Inc., told 400 members of the Executives' club at a luncheon in the Hotel Sherman yesterday.

Col. Dunwoody predicted that in one respect—miles flown on established commercial air lines in the United States—the total for this year probably will be double that of last year. He said mail poundage will show an increase of almost 2,000,000 pounds and the number of passengers carried will be almost 100,000 more than last year.

"I believe that aviation, radio and television, either as individual industries or as a group, will lead business back to normal and increased prosperity," he said. "In the last eighteen months one operating unit of an air transport line reduced its monthly operating loss from $200,000 to almost nothing.

"The growth of aviation in the United States since 1918 has been phenomenal. In that year a total of 16,000 miles were flown carrying the air mail. The next year the total jumped to 160,066 miles—ten times the distance. In 1921 the total mileage had grown to 1,854,985 and in 1926 it passed the 2,000,000 mark.

"Following Col. Lindbergh's epic flight the growth of aviation went by leaps and bounds. In 1926 a total of 22,064,727 miles was flown in commercial operations. The following year the total exceeded 35,000,000, and in 1928 that figure was doubled. Again the previous year's total was doubled, in 1929, and more than doubled in 1930, with a total of 225,000,000 miles flown. This year we are flying a total of 500,000,000 miles or more.

"Air mail poundage started at 17,831 in 1918. Last year it was 7,719,698 pounds, and this year it will exceed 9,500,000 pounds. In 1928, 49,713 passengers were carried, last year 385,910 were carried, and this year the total will exceed 450,000. In the United States we had 1,782 airports last year and this year we have 2,230 airports."

ASKS $50,000 OF CONTRACTOR IN LOVE THEFT SUIT

James G. Cole of Indianapolis filed suit for $50,000 yesterday in the Superior court against Warren B. Eldred, a general contractor living in the Lake Lane Apartment hotel, 6214 Winthrop avenue, charging him with alienating the affections of Cole's wife, Lorraine.

In his bill Cole states that after he moved from Chicago to Indianapolis his wife made frequent trips here to visit two sisters who live in the hotel. He charges Mrs. Cole met Eldred last Thanksgiving day and that in March his wife left him and has since lived at the hotel with Eldred.

Louis Schram, 2707 Euclid Park place, Evanston, filed a suit for $100,000 in the Circuit court charging alienation of affections against Saunder Karger, a wholesale dealer in notions living at the Chicago Beach hotel. Schram's wife, Rena, divorced him last July 18 on grounds of cruelty and six days later was married to Karger. Schram, a representative of a silk hosiery concern, charges that following the divorce he discovered that Karger had been a frequent visitor to the Schram home when business took Schram out of the city.

FATE OF CAPONE WILL REST WITH THE JURY TODAY

that just as soon as he discovered the contrary he went to Washington and hired an attorney and tried to pay what he owed. And why didn't they let him pay it instead of using the evidence to try to put him in jail?

Calls Jury the Bulwark.

"Are they really prosecuting this defendant because of an attempt to defraud the United States on income, or is it just to use that as a means to stow Al Capone away? If the latter, don't you [the jury] be a party to it. You are our only bulwark that can resist oppression in a time of public excitement. Judges cannot do it. The fathers of this country put this power in the hands of the people."

As Mr. Fink pleaded for the gangster chief he waved his arms high, and many in the courtroom, following his gestures, looked above to the paintings on the walls above the jury box. Here sat a conclave of the fathers of this country, probably engaged in constitution making. They made quite a contrast with the group below.

CLAWSON'S ARGUMENT

The morning session began with the address of Assistant United States Attorney Samuel G. Clawson, who concluded the government's opening argument to the jury. Mr. Clawson confined his remarks almost exclusively to the Mattingly letter.

"Mattingly told the revenue agents that he would consult with Capone about his tax liability," said Mr. Clawson. "Then he consulted with Capone and returned to the agents. His client was willing to coöperate with the government, but did not want anything he said to be used against him for criminal prosecution.

"He was told by Agent Wilson that the revenue agents' office had nothing to do with criminal prosecution, could extend no immunity. The taxpayer could talk if he pleased, but he did so at his own peril.

Mattingly Brings in Capone.

"Then Mattingly decided to bring Capone in. Capone was present at this conference and heard what was said. If Mattingly overstepped his authority under his power of attorney from Capone, Capone had a chance to speak. And if he had not received a fair warning against incriminating statements before, this time he was certainly warned.

"Mr. Herrick [C. W. Herrick, internal revenue agent in charge of the Chicago office] told him that any statements that could be used against him probably would be used. He didn't say they might be; he said they would. But when Mr. Herrick asked whether, according to the defendant's statements, the taxable years in question would be 1926 to 1929, inclusive, Capone himself spoke up. 'That's it exactly,' he said. That was the most significant thing about the interview—Capone's own admission of his liability.

"Can you, gentlemen of the jury, entertain any serious doubt that Capone knew what this was about? He was there. He had a liability. He was willing to pay and he had the money. Even though he had lost from $47,000 to $110,000 a year on the races, as the defense has shown us, and his expenditures for luxuries had been enormous, as we have shown, he still had the money and wanted to pay his taxes. Is it conceivable, then, that he had no taxable income?

The Estimate of $266,000.

"Then on Sept. 20 [1930] Mattingly brought in the letter. He had consulted with Capone and this was the best they could do—an estimate of taxable income of $26,000 for 1926, $40,000 for 1927, and $100,000 each for the years 1928 and 1929.

"He had tried to get the revenue agents to say that the admission would not be used against his client; now (in the letter) Mattingly is saying it himself. The letter says: 'This statement is made without prejudice to the taxpayer in any criminal action that may be instituted against him.'

"Suppose a speeder, when stopped by an officer, should say: 'I am telling you this without prejudice, officer; I don't want it used against me; but I was going 50 miles an hour.'

"Suppose a gambler could tack a little sign on a roulette wheel: 'This device is not to be used as evidence against me.'

"Suppose a murderer could put a sign on his gun: 'This weapon is not to be used as evidence against me.'

"What a refuge for criminals that would be! And yet, that is what we have here: 'I am telling you this, but it is not to be used against me.'

The Matter of Evasion.

"It was stated in the letter that the amounts of taxable income set forth were based on information and belief only, that the defendant had no records. Of course not! Capone himself could not trace that stream of gold that poured in and out.

"Prior to the year 1926, it was stated, the defendant's income was not more than $75 a week. He was just an employé of Johnny Torrio. How about the year 1925? That's the year he bought a $13,500 McFarland automobile.

"Is a man to be assessed for income taxes on his own figures just because he keeps no records? Such a thing would be an escape for all tax dodgers, an outrageous thing, an inducement to conceal income and keep no records. This is a thing to be considered in connection with the evasion counts of the indictments."

FINK OPENS FOR DEFENSE

Mr. Fink opened the arguments for the defense, analyzing and assailing the government's evidence, piece by piece, and digressing in a lengthy discussion of the law. He spoke for two hours and twenty minutes.

"This is not an ordinary case, gentlemen," he began. "There are two principal questions. First, of an individual or private nature, concerning this defendant. This question is whether there is evidence in this case that even rises to the dignity of hearsay on which to find the defendant guilty.

"Second, of a public nature, affecting the whole community. This question is, whether there is any evidence or not, can the jury be cajoled into convicting this defendant to appease a public clamor."

Outlines the Indictments.

Mr. Fink then outlined the first indictment, with one count, charging attempts to evade and defeat taxes for the year 1924, and the second, with twenty-two counts. The second indictment, he explained, contains four "evade and defeat" counts for each of the years 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928, and 1929, and one "failure to file" count for each of two years, 1928 and 1929.

He then told the jurors that to convict Capone they must find that his attempts to evade taxes were done with a willful intent to defraud the United States.

"It is in evidence, gentlemen," Mr. Fink went on, "that Capone was released from the Philadelphia prison on March 17, 1930, two days after his income tax return for the year 1929 was due. Six days later, on March 23, he had retained a lawyer and that lawyer said Capone wanted to pay his taxes. How in the world can you find him guilty of willful intent to defraud the government for 1929?

Challenges Proof of Income.

"The 1924 indictment alleges income of $123,000. Where is the proof? There is not a scintilla of evidence that he made a dollar in 1924. There is not even any evidence that he spent any money that year, with the exception of a $4,500 automobile.

"The records show that the profits of a Cicero gambling house from May to December, 1924, were $300,350. I suppose the theory of the government is that because in May of the next year Capone told certain people he owned the place he owned it in 1924.

"There was a very interesting sheet in that book, exhibit 3, about this gambling house. Assuming that the initial "A" referred to Al Capone, then what does it mean? That Frank paid to Al $17,500. In other words, that Al was in debt to the house for $17,500. Assuming that "A" meant Al, that "J" meant Jack Guzik, that Frank meant Frankie Pope, that Ralph meant Ralph Capone and Pete meant Peter Penovich, and that the amounts opposite their names represented their percentages.

"Let us assume this, although it has not been proved, and what have you? The only percentage Al had was one-half of 17½ per cent, or 8¾ per cent, for he shared an entry with Jack Guzik.

Discusses Raid of 1925.

"Now, as for 1925. He is supposed to have told Bragg and Morgan and the Rev. Mr. Hoover [members of a raiding party] that he owned the place. Let's assume that was true. It proves only that he said that on that day he was the owner of a gambling house. There is no proof that he owned it the next day.

"Now as for 1926. What evidence is there that he was in the gambling business this year? Are they asking you to convict him for that year just because he had a gambling business in 1925?

"And in 1927 Jimmy Monaf, the manager of the gambling house, went to California about the middle of January. Ralph Capone came in and said Penovich would take charge. Ries, the cashier, saw Al Capone in the telegraph room talking to Jack Guzik. Imagine such evidence! Because Al was talking to Jack Guzik he had an interest in the place.

"In 1928? Well, in that year he cashed some Guzik checks, in payment for furniture and other purchases. Wouldn't that argue to you that Al borrowed money from Guzik, instead of getting dividends?

"Now 1929, the last year. What evidence have they? Absolutely nothing except that he lost $110,000 betting on the races, and we introduced that.

"All it shows is that he had money. This is the most remarkable proposition I ever heard of. Because I spend $100 or $10,000 this year it means that was my net income."

Argues on Legal Point.

Mr. Fink then launched into an exposition of the ancient legal concept of attempt to commit a crime, and criticized the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for its affirmation of the Ralph Capone and Lawrence C. O'Brien income tax convictions, declaring the court had eliminated frustration as one of the essential elements of an attempt to do a criminal act.

Assistant United States Attorney Jacob I. Grossman objected to arguments to the jury on legal points, and Judge Wilkerson said that he himself would state the law to the jurors and would direct them to ignore the efforts of attorneys for either side to instruct them on points of law.

Later the court inquired: "Mr. Fink, do you think that one can attempt to defraud the government by remaining silent when it is his duty to speak?"

MR. FINK—That is the difference, your honor, between attempt and intent.

THE COURT—All right; I'll instruct the jury.

"There is not a man in this courtroom who doesn't know that Al never attempted to defraud the government," Mr. Fink went on. "A tinhorn or a piker might do that, but never accuse Capone of being a tinhorn or a piker. He is generous, lavish. If he didn't pay it was from some other motive than intent to defraud the government."

Mr. Fink spoke until 1:30 p. m., then court took a recess for lunch.

AHERN ADDRESSES JURY

When the session was resumed at 2:30 Mr. Ahern began the closing argument for the defense. Since Mr. Fink had devoted himself largely to a discussion of the law in the case, Mr. Ahern's address dealt principally with the evidence against Capone.

He first reminded the jurors that they had been asked, when they were accepted, if they had any reason to want the defendant in the penitentiary. This, he told them, was to assure Capone a fair trial. "You are an independent body," he added, "bound to take the law from the court and the facts from no one except the witnesses."

"The government," cried Mr. Ahern, emphasizing his words by blows of his fist on the jury box rail, "has sought by inference, by presumption and by circumstantial evidence to prove this defendant guilty. It has sought to free itself from the law, to convict him merely because his name is Alphonse Capone.

Robin Hood and Cato.

"Why does it seek to convict him on such meager evidence? Because Capone has grown into a mythical Robin Hood, whose name is bandied all over the nation. In Rome during the Punic wars there lived a senator named Cato. Cato passed upon the morals of the people; he decided what they should eat, what they should drink, and what they should think. Carthage fell twice, but Carthage grew again and was once more powerful. Cato concluded every speech he made in the senate by thundering: 'Carthage must be destroyed!'

"These censors of ours, these prosecutors, the newspapers, all cry: 'Capone must be destroyed!'"

If Capone were on trial in a civil suit, Mr. Ahern argued, no member of the jury would be able, honestly, to write the sum Capone owes in taxes.

"If you would be that careful with his money, I pray you, men, be more careful of taking his liberty," the lawyer said. "Liberty is far more precious than property.

Capone the Spendthrift.

"The evidence in this case shows only one thing against Capone—that he was a spendthrift. The government, too, is guilty of profligacy by bringing these witnesses here to recite their inferences.

"It is spending thousands of dollars for that purpose, and in these depressed times this money could better be spent on soup kitchens.

"A witness came from Florida [Henry Keller] to tell of a conversation he had with Capone wherein Capone said he began work as a bartender at Coney Island. This was done so that it might prejudice you gentlemen, but Grossman said, when we objected, that he sought to show 'the humble beginnings' of the defendant. Actually he wished to show that Capone had not inherited money. If you convict on this sort of evidence, every spendthrift in the country should be imprisoned."

Mr. Ahern then turned to the "corpus delicti"—the body of the crime—and asserted that none had been established. He moved on to the contents of the Mattingly letter, saying of it: "You gentlemen cannot even think of admission unless the government has proved the corpus delicti by independent evidence.

"Mr. Clawson says that the only way to convict the defendant is through the admissions of the Mattingly letter. He said there is no other way. If there is no other way, then there is no case. Admission is only competent if the corpus delicti has been established."

Mr. Ahern termed the questioning of Capone by Florida authorities a "Spanish inquisition." He said:

"Were these holier-than-thou gentlemen interested in whether the defendant was going to open a gambling house in Miami, a city which thrives on money spent in its gambling houses by northerners? That was the start of the government's investigation of Capone's income tax liability. It is fair to assume that the officials were acting on orders from Washington. It was in August, 1928, just two months before the presidential election."

Says Capone Had to Answer.

Attorney Ahern pointed to the questioning of Capone by the internal revenue agents and said that under the law Capone had to answer or be guilty of a misdemeanor.

"Do you think that was a voluntary statement?" he asked. "Capone was called to Florida for one thing—to entrap and lure him for the department at Washington.

"They show that Capone had money under assumed names in support of the charge that he concealed his income. What of it? Concealment of what? We are back where we started, for they must prove that he had an income to conceal.

"In closing I want to say that it is my firm conviction that the government has wholly failed to prove its case."

This concluded the final arguments for the defense and court was adjourned until this morning.

JUDGE WILKERSON CONTINUES D'ANDREA CASE TILL MONDAY

The contempt case of Philip D'Andrea, Al Capone's bodyguard, who was arrested with a revolver in his belt last Saturday while leaving Federal Judge Wilkerson's courtroom, was called for hearing at 10:30 o'clock yesterday, but was continued until Monday morning by the judge. D'Andrea is being held in jail at the order of Judge Wilkerson.

Attorney Joseph R. Roach, who has been specially retained as counsel by D'Andrea, was in the courtroom yesterday with an armful of law books and was prepared to proceed with the trial, but made no objection to the continuance.

18 CAPITAL POLICE INDICTED IN LATEST BRUTALITY INQUIRY

Washington, D. C., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—The indictment of 18 Washington policemen today on charges of criminal assault marked the latest development in the federal government's investigation into the use of third degree methods by the capital police.

The federal grand jury brought in fourteen separate indictments naming fifteen police privates and three detective sergeants, and also indicted a civilian accused of obstructing justice by tampering with a government witness in the brutality hearings.

Superintendent of Police Henry G. Pratt, suspended thirteen of the accused men as soon as the grand jury's action was made known to him. The other five are under suspension as the result of their previous indictment by the disqualified grand jury.

Six of today's indictments charged the policemen with assault with dangerous weapons, the grand jury naming wooden clubs and pieces of rubber hose as the weapons employed. The other eight indictments were for simple assault.

Cecil Mason, a civilian and a self-styled "friend of the police," was also indicted today.

It was also learned that the long awaited report on third degree condition here has been prepared by the bureau of investigation of the department of justice and will be submitted to the district commissioners.

CITY BILLBOARD RECORDS GONE, ALDERMEN FIND

Drastic Action Taken to Oust Illegal Signs.

Charles W. Lane, senior clerk in the city building department, yesterday admitted to a subcommittee of the city council that in 1929 he destroyed all records dealing with the issuance of billboard permits prior to 1923.

This admission that the records are incomplete was held by the aldermen, headed by Ald. Thomas J. O'Grady, to explain Building Commissioner Ericson's refusal to allow the public to examine the records, although the destruction took place under his predecessor, Christian Paschen.

Lane said he destroyed the records on orders of the late Peter Hoey, who was secretary of the building department under Commissioner Paschen. He at first intimated that the present deputy commissioner, Robert Knight, knew about the destruction of the records at the time. When Knight denied this, Lane said he might have been mistaken.

Makes Inquiry Difficult.

No reason was given why the records were destroyed or why the destruction stopped at the 1923 records. But it was pointed out by the aldermen that it is now impossible in most cases to determine whether or not a billboard is legally erected from an examination of the building department records. However, any claim that a permit was issued before 1923 cannot be disproved by the records.

"This admission demands drastic action," said Ald. O'Grady. "No wonder it has been possible for advertising companies to erect 9,500 illegal signs in this city. The only remedy is a survey of every billboard in the city. I shall ask the police commissioner to have every policeman furnish a list of the billboards on his beat. When we get this list we'll make the companies show their permits or tear down their billboards."

It is possible that charges will be preferred against Lane, the alderman said. He was thought, however, to be an innocent dupe in the matter, merely taking orders from a higher officer. It was said that a high official in the building department who has served many years may be named in the investigation.

Company Pays Fees.

Representatives of the General Outdoor Advertising company, which practically controls the billboard privilege in Chicago, were present when the subcommittee met. It was revealed that the company, after a meeting of the judiciary committee Thursday, paid $1,517 in fees which it had owed for 1930.

The present secretary of the building department, Edmund Curry, is preparing a list yesterday of the permits still left in the department files. He said he hoped to have this list ready for the next meeting of the judiciary committee Oct. 29.

PRESIDENTIAL YACHT FINALLY SOLD FOR $16,105

Washington, D. C., Oct. 16.—(AP)—Going, going, gone! The U. S. S. Mayflower, yacht of Presidents, sold for $16,105.

Secretary Adams today approved a bid for that amount, offered by Leo P. Coe of Chicago. All he will get is a charred hulk. For while the navy was trying six times to sell the famous vessel, she burned and sank at her dock in Philadelphia.

Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, and Coolidge enjoyed many pleasant hours on the handsome craft, but President Hoover didn't want her. Nobody else seemed to want her very much when the navy asked for bids.

OFFICIALS SEEK EARLY HEARING ON BELL'S SANITY

The authorities moved yesterday to obtain a prompt hearing on the insanity petition which saved Frank Bell, condemned murderer, from execution yesterday morning.

Bell, heavily manacled and guarded by four bailiffs, was taken yesterday afternoon before Judge James J. Kelly of the Criminal court, who permitted the filing of the insanity petition and issued the writ of supersedeas which caused Bell to be taken from the death cell only twenty-six minutes before he was to have marched to the electric chair. Richard Sullivan, his companion in the killing of Christ Patras, a restaurant proprietor, was executed.

Assistant State's Attorneys Walker Butler and Ross Lee Laird informed Judge Kelly that the state was ready to proceed with a sanity hearing at once. Attorney Ralph J. Sharp, representing Bell, protested that the defense had not had time even to employ alienists, and asked a two weeks' continuance.

"This is a serious situation," Judge Kelly told the prosecutor. "A man's life is at stake. I want to have a physician, appointed by the court, independent of the state and the defense, examine Bell and report on his sanity."

Raiders Seize Big Still and Arrest Four on Farm

Danville, Ill., Oct. 16.—(AP)—Federal prohibition agents arrested four men in a raid today on a farm four miles north of Kankakee and seized a 100 gallon still, 40,000 gallons of mash, and 500 gallons of alcohol. The men were arraigned today, given an examination, and held to the November grand jury and jailed in default of $5,000 bond each. They were Homer Raymond, former owner of the farm; Nick Bochy, Charles Miller, and Joe Treora, all of Chicago.

In 10 years, millions have been

HELPED TO HEALTH BY KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN

BULK to assist elimination

VITAMIN B to tone the intestinal tract

IRON to help build blood

FOR TEN years and more, millions have been helped to health by the daily use of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. They have found it a safe and delightfully pleasant way to avoid common constipation—with the headaches, the loss of appetite and energy, the sleeplessness that usually go with it.

There are definite, scientific reasons for the benefits of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Laboratory tests show that ALL-BRAN is a valuable source of two things needed to overcome constipation. "Bulk" to gently exercise the intestines. Vitamin B to give them tone.

The fine thing about Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is its gentle action. It has a shredded appearance when you see it in the package, but it isn't at all like that in the body. There it absorbs a great amount of moisture, forming a soft mass which gently carries out the wastes in the intestines.

The Vitamin B in ALL-BRAN helps tone the intestinal tract and keep it healthfully regular. This vitamin is one of Nature's helpers in assisting elimination.

The iron in Kellogg's ALL-BRAN helps build the blood. Research shows that this famous health-cereal contains twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN acts naturally. For that reason it is better than pills and drugs, which whip the intestines to too strenuous action, and often lead to dangerous habits.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient to overcome most types of constipation. If you suffer from intestinal trouble not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN may be enjoyed in a number of ways. Serve as a cereal, with milk or cream, fruits or honey added. Make into delicious fluffy bran muffins, breads, omelets, etc. Recipes on every package.

Remember to get the original—the genuine Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. It comes already cooked, flavored, and krumbled—bran at its best. Sold by all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

The gentle, natural way to relieve common

Face Trial for Election Fund Violations.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—The District of Columbia grand jury today handed down indictments charging willful violation of the federal corrupt practices act by Bishop James Cannon Jr. of the Methodist church, South, whose activities, political and personal, have been the subject of two investigations by his church and two by senatorial committees.

As the climax to nearly two years of controversy revolving about him, Bishop Cannon stands charged with conspiracy to violate the corrupt practices act and of aiding and abetting Miss Ada L. Burroughs, treasurer of the anti-Smith Democratic committee of Virginia, in four willful violations of the act.

Miss Burroughs is named in the indictments with the bishop, who was chairman of the committee during the Democratic fight to beat Gov. Alfred E. Smith in 1928.

Charge Failure to Report.

The two, it is alleged in the grand jury finding, failed to report to the clerk of the house, as required by law, the receipt and disbursement of $65,000 which E. C. Jameson of New York contributed to the campaign to elect presidential electors opposed to Smith.

The indictment contains 10 counts, four alleging the failure of Miss Burroughs to make the required reports at the times specified and with making incomplete reports at unauthorized times. Four further counts charge that the failure was willful and recite the aid given by Bishop Cannon. The two remaining counts charge conspiracy.

Should Bishop Cannon be found guilty on all ten counts he would be liable to a maximum penalty of 10 years imprisonment and a $50,000 fine.

During the grand jury hearing Bishop Cannon declared that because District Attorney Lee A. Rover was a Roman Catholic he had sought to prevent the bishop's appearance before the jury. To this Mr. Rover replied that he had offered to bring the bishop before the jury and the jury had declined.

Arraignment Next Week.

Bishop Cannon is in Atlanta attending a meeting of the house of bishops of his church. He and Miss Burroughs will be arraigned on his return next week.

Investigation of the present case dates back to the spring of 1930, when the senate lobby committee, pursuing charges made by Representative George H. Tinkham [Rep., Mass.] and Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.] first disclosed the details of the Jameson contributions. The committee's inquiry, however, came to a close when its authority was challenged by the bishop.

Later the senate campaign expenditures committee took up the investigation and produced evidence showing that some of the Jameson funds had passed to the bishop's private account. Miss Burroughs was called to testify but refused, and was warned that she might be held in contempt of the senate.

Bishop's Wall Street Career.

Meanwhile Bishop Cannon had been called to answer charges of stock gambling before the quadrennial conference of his church at Dallas. It had been shown that he had speculated, mostly at a loss, with the now defunct bucket shop of Kable & Co., in New York, the chief operator of which, Harry L. Goldhurst, is now serving a five year prison sentence. Bishop Cannon was acquitted of willful wrongdoing by the board of bishops, but was reported to have missed elevation to a higher office as a result of the inquiry.

Further attacks on him culminated in the presentation of secret charges against him by four church elders. A hearing on these was held last February and the bishop was announced as having been cleared.

LONDON WIFE FIGHTS CHICAGO DIVORCE ACTION

Divorce proceedings instituted here against Mrs. Patricia Primrose White of London, a relative of Albert Primrose, earl of Rosebery, by her husband, Henry George Ronald White, son of Maj. Henry White of London, a retired British army officer, were revealed yesterday.

Mrs. White filed a cross-bill in the Superior court denying her husband's charge that she deserted him. She charged in the pleading, drawn by Attorney Clyde E. Shorey, that a year after her marriage on Nov. 6, 1926, in London, her husband went to St. Moritz, Switzerland, alone. She wrote many letters urging him to return to her, she asserts, but he disregarded her pleas.

In the original action, begun last March, White asserted that his wife had deserted him for a period of two years. No other allegations were made in the brief bill filed by the law firm of Wilson, McIlvaine, Hale, and Templeton.

Mrs. White now is voyaging to America to contest the divorce. Her husband, according to his attorneys, is employed in a technical position at the Commonwealth Edison company, as a means of completing his education begun in an engineering school near London. He resides at the Sovereign hotel, 6200 Kenmore avenue.

STEAL CLOTHING IN HOLDUP.

Two gunmen and a woman held up Mrs. Jennie Connors in her rooming house at 2901 West Adams street and carried away $400 worth of clothing yesterday.

U. S. DRY AGENTS CHARGE POLICE HELP SAVE BEER

Newark, N. J., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—Twenty men prevented five prohibition enforcement agents from seizing eight trucks loaded with 1,500 half barrels of alleged beer in a garage in Hoboken today, according to the agents' report to Louis J. Tutt, deputy prohibition administrator here.

The agents asserted that several uniformed policemen assisted the men to get away with the beer, frustrating the attempt of the agents to seize it.

At prohibition enforcement headquarters in Newark it was said that John D. Pennington, prohibition administrator at Philadelphia, was preparing to take legal action against the Hoboken policemen accused by the agents concerned in the raid.

WOMAN SHOT AT DANCE.

Herrin, Ill., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—Mrs. Riley McKlesin, 37, was shot in the back at a country dance on a farm near here last night. George King is held in the Marion jail, charged with the shooting.

JUDGE CONVICTS GRAPE PRODUCTS FIRM, MANAGER

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 16.—(AP)—The sale and possession of grape concentrate for winemaking purposes was outlawed in a verdict today by United States District Judge Merrill E. Otis.

Judge Otis convicted the Ukiah Grape Products Company, Inc., of New York, distributors of a grape concentrate product, of violating the national prohibition laws.

The concern was fined $100 on each of seven counts, five for sale and two alleging possession.

A. E. Brunett, former Kansas City branch manager of the company, was fined $50 on each of five counts charging sale.

Counsel for the Ukiah company announced an appeal would be taken to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals to test the decision, which struck a blow at the California grape industry, which has been aided by federal farm board funds.

TOLD PRESS CAN STEER WORLD OFF ANARCHY ROAD

Menacing Politics Pictured to Editors.

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 16.—(AP)—Col. Robert R. McCormick looked to the press today to steer the world clear of the political action that leads to anarchy.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE publisher, a director of The Associated Press, told a convention of Illinois newspaper editors and publishers that "rescue of our nation from the mistaken politics which are threatening to engulf England is dependent upon the courage and the clear vision of our newspapers."

He gave the opinion that in the lifetime of living generations, financial, industrial, agricultural, and political conditions have never been so low.

"Government in Decline."

"All over the world government is in decline," said Col. McCormick. "Bloody tyranny flourishes under the name of 'proletariat' in Russia, socialistic governments have bankrupted Austria, Australia, New Zealand, and Germany. The Labor government of England has brought that rich and powerful empire to the verge of ruin. Our own governments, national, state, and municipal, are threatening the same to us."

The publisher recalled his own statement years ago that "the press furnishes that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide," and added that the press, which "is destroyed by either autocracy or anarchy," has steadily steered "the solid course between absolutism and anarchy."

"If we fail in this extremity," Col. McCormick concluded, "the nation fails."

Railway Defends Soviet.

Representative Henry T. Rainey, Carrollton, a member of the congressional ways and means committee, told of his recent trip into soviet Russia. He discounted much of the information disseminated in this country concerning the soviet union, and asserted there is no unemployment nor forced labor there.

Discussing the soviet method of handling intoxicating liquor problems, he said, "I did not see over ten or twelve drunken men in all Russia. Habitual drunkards are sent to hospitals and cured, or arrested. Fines levied on persons who go on 'drunken sprees' go into a fund to provide entertainment in rest homes where workers take their vacations."

Charles F. Collisson, agricultural editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, described his newspaper's ten year plan to revive business in Minnesota, the Dakotas, and Montana.

What's Wrong with Wheat.

"Farmers in the northwest," Collisson said, "have found that an act of congress can never restore lost fertility to wheat-sick soils, clean up weedy grain fields or raise sagging wheat yields. These things and not price are the real wheat problems in the northwest."

President Harry Woodburn Chase of the University of Illinois was also a banquet speaker.

BRITISH POLICE CRACK HEADS OF JOBLESS RIOTERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 16.—More clashes between police and unemployed demonstrators occurred today in Cardiff. Many were wounded in the fracas. Demonstrators led by communists attempted to parade through the city, despite a police edict.

The chief of police tried to persuade the mob against marching, but the rioters knocked him down. Police reserves drew batons and attacked the crowd. The wounded were picked up by their comrades and carried away. Others were admitted to the hospital for scalp wounds.

London was also the scene of an unemployed demonstration tonight, when traffic was held up on the banks of the Thames during a parade of 2,000 men and women to the new city hall to protest against cutting the dole. Five hundred police, afoot and mounted, escorted the paraders, to curb any possible disorder. The iron gate to the city hall were shut and the demonstrators marched off to Hyde Park, singing.

ARKANSAS LEGISLATOR ASKS WANDA HAWLEY FOR KISS AND GETS IT

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 16.—(AP)—State Representative W. L. Ward kissed Wanda Hawley, the motion picture actress, before the house of representatives today by explicit invitation from none other than Wanda herself.

It all happened in this manner:

Miss Hawley appeared in a show here and Representative Ward, a widower, sponsored a legislative invitation for her to visit the house. He introduced her on the floor and in so doing he said he wished he could kiss her. Then he went to his seat as she began talking.

"If Mr. Ward were up here now, I'd grant his wish," the actress rejoined before the representative had more than gained his chair.

Ward heard well and, starting down the aisle on a run, planted a resounding kiss on Miss Hawley's lips.

Financial Parleys Open on Ship.

ABOARD THE S. S. ILE DE FRANCE, en Route to New York, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Randolph Burgess, deputy governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, changed his sailing plans at the last moment to accompany Premier Laval of France, who is aboard this vessel on his way to confer with President Hoover in Washington.

Mr. Burgess talked financial matters today with several of the French experts aboard.

Laval intends to devote his afternoons and evenings to work, dining in his suite. He found more than 200 telegrams and cablegrams waiting for him when he boarded the ship.

Accompanied by Daughter.

HAVRE, France, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Premier Laval sailed on the Ile de France today for his conferences with President Hoover, taking with him the assurances of American Ambassador Edge that the American people eagerly await his arrival.

At his side as the big liner pulled out was his daughter, José, just under 20 years, an olive-skinned, smiling girl, who said she was enjoying the happiest day of her life.

The premier received an enthusiastic send-off from Havre. He was accorded a reception at the city hall and then proceeded through lanes of well-wishers to his pier.

"I am convinced I am working for Franco-American collaboration," he said. "I am aiming at world peace."

José Is Excited.

His daughter, who wore a long brown coat with collar and cuffs of leopard, a brown and white checked wool dress, and a brown hat trimmed with a brick colored bow, talked of less weighty matters.

"I am so delighted to go to America, for I have wanted to go all my life," she said. "I want to see the American girls. Everybody says they are so chic and charming. I am looking forward with great pleasure to meeting them."

Mlle. Jacqueline Guimier and Mlle. Reine Claudel, daughter of France's ambassador to the United States, are Mlle. Laval's traveling companions.

Gets 5 Years for Violation of Texas Anti-Mask Law

Linden, Tex., Oct. 16.—(AP)—William Sullivan, 21, was convicted here today on a charge of violating the Texas anti-mask law and sentenced to five years' imprisonment. He was found guilty of disguising himself as a Negro in the kidnaping of J. H. Boyd, a filling station operator, on the night of Sept. 17.

SPAIN'S ACTION AGAINST CHURCH ANGERS PONTIFF

Lifts Voice in Protest; Calls Special Prayer.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Oct. 16.—Pope Pius XI. today lifted his voice in indignant protest against the Spanish constituent assembly's decision to oust the Jesuits, to separate church and state, and to regulate the monasteries.

Not to the Spanish government, however, was the protest sent, but to the apostolic nuncio, Msgr. Frederico Tedeschini, who was charged to communicate it to all cardinals, archbishops, priests, and faithful of Spain, which precludes, according to the belief held tonight, an open break between the Vatican and the Spanish republic and the immediate withdrawal of the nuncio, as had been reported.

In his communication to the nuncio, the Roman pontiff first bids him to tell the Catholics of Spain that he has been with them in spirit, sharing the damage and grief of the present moment and the menaces and perils of the future.

Protests "Multiple Offenses."

Then the pontiff, "with all the energy of his apostolic ministry, highly protests against the multiple offenses inflicted on the sacrosanct rights of the church, which are the rights of God and of souls."

Finally the pope's message to the nuncio, recalling the recent encyclical, urges all Catholics to hold a common day of prayer next Sunday, which the pope himself will offer during a special visit to St. Peter's cathedral in Rome, that the "great tribulations which afflict the church and the faithful people of the beloved Spanish nation may cease."

Vote to Permit Divorce.

MADRID, Oct. 16.—(AP)—The Spanish national assembly voted today, 169 to 153, to authorize the granting of divorces to men and women on equal terms. The action of the assembly constituted a revision of its decision yesterday, when it was decided to leave the divorce question to be governed by special future legislation. The new provision authorizes divorces "for just cause." Under the previous Spanish law divorces were not granted at all.

COOK COUNTY'S FAIR OPENS IN STADIUM TODAY

The Cook County fair, in former years held at Palatine, will open today in the Chicago Stadium for a nine day run with a wide variety of exhibits of live stock and farm products, horse show events, side shows, industrial and style shows, and presentations by members of the Junior league. The fair will be open from noon until 11:30 p. m. each day. Contests between schools and an extemporaneous singing class are planned. The fair will mark Cook county's 100th birthday, in celebration of which an immense cake will be baked and passed out to the crowd, Manager Steinmetz said.

Quits as "Y" Secretary, Held for Embezzlement

Huntington, Ind., Oct. 16.—(AP)—J. A. Kramien, who resigned last week after 16 years' service as secretary of the Y. M. C. A. here, was arrested today, charged with embezzlement of $2,000 of the institution's funds.

FLY TO FISHING HOLES.

Kenosha, Wis., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—Four Kenosha pilots are taking a week-end fishing trip 400 miles north of Kenosha. Floyd Bayliss, Howard Gatley, Al Steinbrecher, and Ben Stahl flew today in two planes, expecting to return to Kenosha Sunday.

SEIZE 'PEPPER THIEF' SUSPECT AFTER ROBBERY

Paul Cave, 32 years old, of 5046 Winthrop avenue, was arrested last night as the pepper thief who earlier in the day threw a handful of pepper into the eyes of Miss Catherine Halsen, 4945 North Whipple street, and snatched her brief case containing $254.

The theft occurred in the corridor of the Knight Soda Fountain company, 2701 North Kildare avenue, of which she is cashier, and was witnessed by Robert Parker, 3219 North Keating avenue, an employé.

Parker noted the license of the car in which the robber escaped and Lieut. Thomas O'Hare of the Cragin station traced it to Harold Nelson, 5048 Winthrop avenue. Nelson said he had loaned his machine the day before to Cave. Cave was then seized and later identified as the pepper bandit by Parker. Police also arrested Victor Stock, 4911 Winthrop avenue.

SIX LOOP OWNERS PAY $149,953 ON PROTESTED LEVY

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Six owners of valuable loop property who are protesting in court their tax assessments due May 15 last, paid a total of $149,952.90 in taxes yesterday. This is approximately 80 per cent of their taxes, aggregating $186,-941.46.

These payments, added to the $261,-010 previously reported, make a total of $411,326 for the last three days; and the payment, on account, of $26,- it is promised for this morning.

In addition, Attorney Jacob Arvey for the Cook County Trust company obtained permission yesterday from Judge Michael Feinberg to pay taxes on properties for which the trust company is receiver. This company is expected to make some payments today in advance of The Chicago Title and Trust company, which has tentatively decided to pay from $165,000 to $170,000 in taxes on Monday on certain properties under their jurisdiction.

Estimate Tax at $320,000.

The Cook County Trust company is receiver for 250 to 300 properties, according to Mr. Arvey, on which the taxes are estimated at $320,000.

The properties on which County Treasurer McDonough yesterday received partial payment on 1929 taxes and the payment on each are as follows:

	Amount of tax.	Paid on account.
[illegible], 100 W. Monroe-st.	$61,790.10	$40,000.00
[illegible] Hotel, 161 E. Walton-pl.	18,682.41	12,000.00
[illegible] Building corp., [illegible] and Lake	33,129.97	21,000.00
[illegible] building, 105 S. Wabash-av.	29,716.87	22,000.00
[illegible] Co. La Salle bldg., 120 W. Madison-st.	37,941.57	31,000.00
Total	$186,897.44	$149,953.90

There was other evidence yesterday that wealthy real estate owners, who are objecting to their taxes, believe that they should pay the part of the tax they believe fair, and contest the remainder in the courts. The owners of about 200,000 parcels of real estate on which the taxes total $71,000,000 are protesting their taxes in court and few of these have paid any part of their assessments.

Offer Advance Payment.

As illustrative of the new viewpoint, Mayor Cermak yesterday received the following letter signed by Nathan Lieberman, Harold M. Marks, and Leo Solomon:

"The undersigned, owners of business property in Chicago valued at about $2,000,000, hereby notify you that we are ready and willing to pay immediately 66 per cent on account of 1930 taxes, based on the 1929 rate.

"We do this to coöperate with your strenuous efforts to lift the Chicago financial situation out of the mire. We feel that the majority of property owners in Chicago will fall in line with this measure of coöperation, and that if a number of mass meetings were arranged, inviting owners, millions of dollars could be raised immediately from these property owners on the 1930 taxes, in addition to what they may do on the taxes for 1929."

The tax lawyers have said that no valid receipt for taxes can be issued until the assessments have been made and placed in collection, but officials pointed out that the attitude of this city is in striking contrast with that of thousands of property owners who are protesting their taxes.

Name Receiver to Get Taxes.

Superior Judge William J. Lindsay yesterday appointed P. M. O'Brien, south side real estate dealer, receiver for the six flat building at 4432 Cottage Grove avenue. The receivership was asked by Henry M. Ashton, special tax attorney for the county, who asserted that the owner of the property, William V. Grear, has not paid taxes on it between 1920 and 1928. The taxes, penalties, and interest, Mr. Ashton said, total $13,964.

Judge Lindsay instructed the receiver to place the rents in a trust to meet the tax bills. County Judge Jarecki two days ago suggested that a receiver could be appointed to collect the taxes from income-producing property.

County Officials Meet.

County Treasurer McDonough presented to his committee of county officials on delinquent taxes a list of 22 north side properties on which the total taxes are $741,284—an average of $33,700 per holding. A decision on proceedings against these owners was deferred until this morning to hear State's Attorney Swanson.

John E. Conroy and Charles Fox of the board of assessors urged that corrections in the 1929 assessments be made by certificate of error to the County court.

J. L. Jacobs, efficiency expert, protested against what he termed "bargain sale adjustments."

"What do you mean by bargain sale adjustments?" asked Fox.

"I have heard that various property owners," replied Jacobs, "are willing to pay their taxes if given reductions."

The adjustment made for the Morrison hotel on a certificate of error is said to have cut $19,000 from the taxes. The penalty also was cut in half.

"Just on that the county lost $3,500," said M. J. O'Connor, deputy controller.

Holds Procedure Is Improper.

"In my opinion a certificate of error was not proper in the Morrison hotel case," commented Hayden Bell, county tax attorney. "I have always taken that position."

Pressed for more comment, Mr. Bell said: "The point of highest intelligence and discretion for the board of assessors lies in the issuance of certificates of error. They lead to running wild or saving everything. Hundreds of tax cases are being corrected on certificates of error based upon judgment, instead of on facts. That has to be stopped, because it is becoming very threatening.

"To illustrate, two appraisers by applying the standard methods of measuring buildings will often differ 3 per cent in the final result. If certificates of error are issued in such cases, there is no telling where we will end."

"No two engineers will agree on the cubic measurements of the Morriso nhotel," commented Edward J. Hughes of the board of review.

"If there is any compromising on taxes, the local governments are lost," said M. F. Kavanagh, chairman of the finance committee of the county board. "If we do not stick close to the line, if we are not harsh now in tax collections, no one will pay their taxes next year."

GETS PROBATION AFTER THEFT.

A. J. Weeg, 31 years old, 5212 Cornell avenue, charged with the embezzlement of $1,900 in securities while employed by A. C. Allyn & Co., brokerage house, was placed on a year's probation by Judge Fairbank yesterday when he promised restitution.

SZYMCZAK REPORTS 24.9 PER CENT CUT IN CITY WAGE TOTAL

Wages and salaries paid out of the city corporate fund were $1,413,729, or 24.9 per cent less in September than they were last April, when Mayor Cermak took over the city administration, Controller Szymczak reported to the mayor yesterday.

The bureau of streets effected the greatest saving in monthly expenditures. The $199,316 reduction in September was a 34.6 per cent saving from the sum spent in April. The police department salaries for September were $122,993 below those for April, but that was only 8.6 per cent of the monthly police budget.

Savings in other principal departments of the city were as follows:

City clerk	$ 1,670
Municipal court	18,697
Controller's office	9,251
City collector	9,385
Fire department	45,983
Department of gas and electricity	19,834
Department of public service	3,400
Health department	47,750
Board of local improvements	7,850
Commissioner's office—public works	1,706
Bureau of maps	2,080
Bureau of sewers	18,316
Bureau of parks and playgrounds	10,150

Mr. Szymczak also reported savings by two city departments of salaries paid from the transit fund. The expenditures of the board of local improvements for transit and subway purposes were cut down $34,751 in September below the April level, and those of the council local transportation committee were reduced $4,622.

FIND TAX PAPER TROUBLE CAUSES DECREASE IN JOBS

Aldermen Seeking Way to Sell Warrants.

The council unemployment committee, headed by Ald. James B. Waller [43d], decided yesterday to present a resolution to the city council pointing out that the city's inability to sell 1931 tax anticipation warrants has decreased employment on city work.

Ald. Oscar F. Nelson [46th] and others criticized the banks, which have so far refused to purchase these warrants. It was charged in the meeting that the purpose of the banks is to force the abolition of the elective board of assessors and board of review.

"The refusal of the banks to buy," explained Ald. Nelson, "has forced the city to buy its own warrants with $18,000,000 raised by bond issues for public improvements. All the work those improvements would have provided has been prevented."

Suggests Sales Plan.

Ald. Thomas Terrell [29th] suggested that the city sell tax warrants over the counter in $50 and $100 denominations, but others asserted that the persons who would ordinarily make such purchases now have no money.

The city has been able to dispose of about $4,500,000 worth of its 1931 tax warrants by giving them to contractors and supply men for materials and apparatus sold the city, according to Deputy Controller Victor Petterson.

The county by the same process has disposed of about $1,500,000 worth of warrants, according to County Controller William J. Graham.

$30,000,000 in City Warrants.

The city has more than $30,000,000 of the 1931 warrants for sale, the board of education has a still larger amount and the county has $8,000,000.

The city and county controllers are willing to write warrants for any amount a customer desires. The school board so far has declined to sell warrants at retail, because the trustees contend that the market price would thereby be decreased.

TWO HELD AS STORE BURGLARS.

Stanley Plsit, 19 years old, 3956 Ferdinand street, and William Richicky, 19, of 4201 Carroll avenue, were held to the grand jury in bonds of $12,500 each yesterday on five charges of robbing stores.

FEMININE WETS AND DRYS TRADE BITING REPARTEE

W. C. T. U. Draws Fire of Mrs. Sabin.

Feminine leaders for and against prohibition had their say about each other yesterday in two north shore gatherings. Mrs. Charles Sabin of New York, head of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, was scornful of the tactics of the W. C. T. U., at a massmeeting last night in Waukegan, held under the auspices of her group and of the Crusaders, a men's anti-prohibition organization.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, national president of the W. C. T. U., took time out from a conference with other officials of the dry organization in Evanston, to make some critical comments on the Sabin followers. The Temperance union authorities were gathered to lay plans for their 1932 activities.

"I believe the repeal of the 18th amendment would be an important factor in restoring prosperity to this country," said Mrs. Sabin at the Waukegan meeting.

Criticizes Boole Speech.

"Mrs. Boole in a recent address in Louisville was quoted as follows: 'The Woman's Organization for National Prohibition Reform spends huge sums of money, yet it asks no dues.' And Mrs. Boole wonders, for publication, 'whether the money comes from the brewers and distillers and foreign liquor interests.'

"It is quite easy to understand why Mrs. Boole thinks we spend huge sums of money. She knows quite well what it cost to put over the 18th amendment. I am glad to say that we are financed by voluntary contributions ranging from 10 cents up, from women who demand temperance in place of prohibition. Mrs. Boole is mistaken in her belief that we spend huge sums."

"Mrs. Boole's intemperate statement would be malicious if it were not so futile for her to insinuate that over 356,000 outstanding American women are subsidized by the liquor interests."

Cheap Slogan, is Retort.

Mrs. Boole on her part stated in an interview that "beer and wine make a cheap political slogan. Either is as impossible as whisky."

"We have never counted society women and debutantes among the drys of the country," said the prohibition leader. "They cannot be relied upon, and their social code prevents sincere efforts to coöperate."

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

AMERICAN FOLLY.

Secretary Adams of the navy has given President Hoover a digest of the proposed economies, slashing of the fleet and its maintenance account, a sacrifice which he was ordered to make. A closing of navy stations is proposed. The prediction is that politics in the seaboard sections affected, Boston, Charleston, etc., will never permit this, and that the administration in the end will be looking for economy in spots more vital to the fleet and less important to consequential politicians. Other reductions of expense will take ships out of commission and reduce the personnel. There will be no political interference here. The estimate is that the fleet will be brought down to seventy-five per cent of its present seagoing efficiency. Mr. Adams is said to be mad, but he has obeyed orders.

Mr. Stimson, secretary of state, either on the President's orders or with his consent, has so handled the American stake in the Manchurian controversy as to center upon the United States the resentment of Japan. Mr. Stimson has chosen the league of nations as the medium of his intervention. He makes the United States in this instance virtually a member of the league, undertaking to cooperate with it, to have part in the decisions it may reach and the action it may take against Japan.

The Japanese conceive this to be a display of direct ill will. The United States has refused to join the league, but it makes an exception of an occasion in which Japan is involved. This exception seems to prove that American desire to interfere with Japan is greater than its desire not to have an entanglement in the league. The Japanese will reason that the American ill will must, upon such proof, be regarded as overpowering. Why otherwise should there be such a reversal of American policy? Why should an American administration take such chances with popular feeling at home if there were not a greater dislike of Japan than of the league in the United States?

Now it is fairly certain that if Japan receives any real check from the league of nations the United States will stand the brunt of the resultant Japanese resentment and this will be a popular feeling easily worked upon by the Japanese war party or any party which may care to use it and it may endure a long time. Americans bewildered by the action of their government will exclaim, "How strange!"

The United States is increasing its foes and reducing its fleet. Its diplomacy works to make enemies by ignoring its own established policy. Its economy works to weaken its defenses. The fixed feeling of Americans against complicity in European arrangements has been ignored to underwrite the decisions of major European powers in a manner which of itself creates needless animosity. It is not necessary for the United States to take the heaviest burden of resentment if Japan is checked in Manchuria, but how can that be escaped if this nation betrays so great an eagerness to lead the league of nations into action when it hitherto has repudiated the league for all the major purposes of its foreign relations?

America has asserted that it would conduct its foreign affairs without such entanglements, but in this most delicate affair it joins the council of the associated powers over the objection of one of the interested members. If this had no other consequences it would be a dangerous precedent. The country has been wise thus far in reserving itself from the obligations of membership in an organization it rightfully distrusts.

In dealing with Japan the manner of the negotiations is almost as important as the substance of them. The state department contrives a manner which defeats any good purpose it could have in endeavoring to bring about an adjustment in Manchurian difficulties. To weaken the navy when such provocation is being given seems to be almost incredible shortsightedness.

There should be economy in government. That should have been considered before a half billion dollars was wasted in the wheat and cotton markets, before $165,000,000 was authorized for a dam to give the Pacific coast water for real estate promotion, before millions were spent to coerce citizens in their personal habits, before any of the extraneous and wasteful functions of government were given countenance. The federal government can be trimmed down and should be. Its expenses can be reduced. Its excessive taxation can be lessened within reason, but to impair its defense when its diplomacy goes loco is such a folly as sometimes is not easily survived by nations exposed to it.

FOUR MURDERERS ELECTROCUTED.

Four murderers put to death in the county jail in one night would seem to indicate that murder still is regarded as a serious crime in this state and county. The execution of the death sentence upon a fifth at the Joliet penitentiary only a week or so ago adds to the impressiveness of the lesson.

Two of the men electrocuted had pleaded guilty, but Judge Philip Finnegan properly refused to accept the pleas as a ground for clemency. They were none the less murderers for having confessed the crime and their victims were none the less dead.

Perhaps the most significant aspect of these cases has been the refusal of the board of pardons and of Gov. Emmerson to commute the sentences. To a man of feeling the temptation always must be strong to commute the death sentence. In some, if not all, of these cases the governor was under great pressure to take this course. He withstood the pressure, and in so doing he showed that in his mind the guilty have no claims to consideration which has not been accorded the innocent victims and their families.

The electrocution of four men in a night is not a pretty thing, but we believe it is a wholesome one. The governor deserves great credit for his steadfast refusal to minimize the lesson out of sentimental considerations for men whose acts have placed them outside the pale.

A LAWLESS LAW.

The Volstead act is founded on a falsehood. The eighteenth amendment prohibits intoxicating beverages. The Volstead act prohibits nonintoxicating beverages. The Volstead act is broader than its base.

The drys demand respect for the eighteenth amendment. The first act of disrespect was the first law they imposed upon the country under the eighteenth amendment.

The Supreme court decision upholding the Volstead act recognized the extension of the scope of the law beyond the limits of the prohibitory mandate, on the ground that it was permissible as an aid to regulation. This was an extreme example of judicial sophistry. It represented perhaps the disposition of the court to avoid collision with the legislative will supposed to be expressive of an overwhelming weight of public opinion. But in effect it was an evasion of the highest duty of the Supreme court, which is to resist that will wherever it contravenes principle or infringes private right. If the clear intent of a constitutional mandate can be so easily overruled by congress, the door is opened wide to repeated invasions of the fundamental law by any congress of the moment. If, because the popular opinion of the moment influences the legislature to infringe the limits placed upon it by the constitution, the guardian of those limits gives way, there is an end to our constitutional system and congress is supreme.

No consideration of expediency should obscure this truth, but the nation's experience with the Volstead act wipes out even the excuse of expediency. It has not proved to have been expedient to permit the perversion of the eighteenth amendment in the Volstead act. It has proved to be a costly blunder. The Volstead act was deeply and justifiably resented as an act of oppression, which it was. It has not won, and it could not win, that respect and obedience which the law abiding people of the United States will always give to any law which conforms to their common principles of justice and consistency. To give such a law approval was therefore not only an act of abdication on the part of the Supreme court but also one of demoralizing inexpediency.

But congress is also and primarily to blame. It permitted an organized claque to impose upon it an act which every congressman knew was an unconscionable expansion of the power conveyed and definitely limited by the eighteenth amendment. Every congressman knew that in fixing the limit of alcoholic content at one-half of one per cent the law prohibited beverages not included in the scope of the eighteenth amendment. Any citizen who is punished for the manufacture, sale, or possession of a beverage nonintoxicating in fact is the victim of unconstitutional force, notwithstanding the sophistry of the judicial decision upon the Volstead act, and it is the first duty of congress to remove this vicious anomaly and restore the law to its proper foundation.

The question of repeal of the eighteenth amendment or the question of proper legislation for the effectuation of that mandate, if retained, is subsequent to that of the Volstead act. The first duty of congress is to repeal a law which is without the law.

Editorial of the Day

[Danville Commercial-News.]

Danville is vitally interested in the movement to have the Dixie highway, officially known as state route one, widened to forty feet between this city and Chicago. More than seventeen thousand residents of the city have already signed petitions to have this done, more signers are expected from here, and the petitions will be circulated in all cities and villages between here and Chicago and south as far as Marshall, for a forty foot pavement to Danville will help the cities to the south of us.

There was a time when route one was the only paved highway in the state and for years it retained that importance, motorists being loath to take some other route south from Chicago. When motorists going to St. Louis or Indianapolis and other contiguous points thought of a route, route one came to their minds—and Danville benefited, as did all the intermediate points.

But times have changed. First there came route forty-one in Indiana and southern Indiana and Indianapolis traffic was routed over forty-one—and Danville lost out. Next came route forty-nine in Illinois and traffic south out of Chicago for Champaign, Bloomington, Decatur, Springfield, and St. Louis started going on forty-nine—and again Danville lost out.

With a forty-foot pavement between this city and Chicago, Danville is going to regain an appreciable part of that diverted traffic and traffic swung away from here on other routes. Various organizations have essayed to bring back this traffic, but nothing has come of it. This is a spontaneous movement of all the people, a monster petition to create a four lane highway from Chicago to Danville. Too many signatures cannot be secured. The state is bound to pay heed to this demand and once more Danville will come into its old importance as the first large city south of Chicago.

Incidentally, Danville's school children deserve the thanks of the entire community for the work accomplished in circulating these petitions in the city in record breaking time. No one organization could have accomplished as much.

ANOTHER REPORT ON ADDISON'S DISEASE.

DR. L. G. ROWNTREE continues to get reasonably favorable results from the treatment of Addison's disease. In this instance he has put his contribution to the subject in the form of a book. He is now able to report on considerably more than one hundred cases—enough to do away with the possibilities that what has happened was by accident or coincidence, and cannot be again expected.

Anything that operates to destroy the outer part of the suprarenal glands can cause the disease. It is, therefore, a secondary disorder, and whether or not it can be cured depends in considerable measure on the cause.

A large part of the cases are due to tuberculosis, and since this infection does not involve this gland until it is widely distributed throughout the body, as a rule, cure is not to be expected. If the cause is incurable there cannot be much hope of a cure of the effect.

Rowntree has another conception of the disorder that is of importance. It is that most cases of Addison's disease are similar in principle to most cases of diabetes, in that the system is without a chemical substance that it needs because of the destruction of the producing organ, and the proper basis of treatment is to supply the need. Since the producing organ has been destroyed, the expectation is that the need must be supplied artificially for an indefinite time. In diabetes this substance is insulin. In Addison's disease it is a purified extract of the suprarenal.

Within these limitations Dr. Rowntree thinks the medical fraternity has now a treatment of value in Addison's disease. He and his associates began by giving suprarenal gland, or its extract [epinephrine], hypodermically, by mouth, and by other routes. This they called the Muirhead treatment.

Then began a multitude of efforts to produce a refined extract of the suprarenal gland. Several are available. Some have proved reasonably satisfactory, from the clinical standpoint, especially one by Swingle and Pfiffner, but no one was on a commercial basis when the report was made. The plan is to use the perfected suprarenal cortex substance daily in a carefully regulated dose, just as insulin is used in diabetes.

Another point of similarity to diabetes is the tendency to develop emergencies. In Addison's disease an emergency results from too great drying out of the tissues. This is met by giving injections of a 10 per cent solution of dextrose and 1 per cent salt. Another emergency that may arise is a sudden dangerous drop in blood pressure. This is met by injections of this new extract, or even by injections of the older preparations, used principally for other purposes.

OIL AND TUBERCULOSIS.

Mrs. L. E. B. writes: I heard some one say that to take coal oil now and then would prevent tuberculosis, and that a man cured himself with it.

REPLY.

Taking an occasional dose of coal oil will neither prevent nor cure consumption. The oil wells of Pennsylvania were sunk near oil springs or seeps, the ooze from which was used as a medicine.

In that day the magic oil was guaranteed to cure rheumatism and many other diseases, but consumption was not on the list.

BOTH OF THEM SAFE.

L. G. writes:

1. Is it safe for a diabetic to apply aluminum chloride to check perspiration under the arm?

2. Is it safe to use ointments to relieve pruritus? I am a diabetic, feeling well, but not sugar free. I have had the disease three years, to my knowledge, and have not been sugar free more than ten days out of that time, even when at the hospital, eating a strictly measured diet and taking insulin.

REPLY.

1. Yes.
2. Yes.

MORTGAGES AND UNPAID TAXES.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—We hold a $1,000 first mortgage, part of a $10,000 mortgage on a flat building. The people owning this building have not paid their taxes. 1. If this property is sold for taxes, do we lose our money? 2. Is there anything we can do? C. M.

1. No, in the sense that the tax alone would not be serious. Redemption from the tax sale would be permitted within two years. After that time a tax deed would issue, which would be a serious cloud on the title.

2. Ordinarily, it is considered wise for the mortgage holder to advance the taxes and foreclose. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

STREET CORNER GANGS.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—[Friend of the People.]—I am taking this means of asking if something can't be done to have some plain clothes men detailed to this vicinity as there are several gangs ranging from the ages of 14 to 20 years and they hold up people. Only last night they got a couple and started choking them and if a woman living nearby had not screamed it would have fared badly for them. These occurrences take place every night after dark. I. H.

This complaint was investigated by squad cars who report that they have visited the vicinity in question at different times nightly during each tour of duty, have stopped and questioned several boys and young men they found loitering in that vicinity, but found nothing on them, and they all gave satisfactory answers in regard to their presence there. The officers further report they warned all boys against loitering in gangs and that they would be locked up if they were found hanging around in the future. They further report that they have since made continuous visits to the neighborhood and found no loitering. They have been instructed to continue their visits and see that these gangs do not start congregating or loitering in the neighborhood.

SELLING OUT.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly advise me what notices are required to be published in selling out a business? J. P.

Depends on the facts and the purpose of the notice. If it is a partnership business, then it may be desirable to give to all customers notice of the dissolution of the partnership. If the purchaser wishes to be guarded against having to pay creditors, notice should be given under the bulk sales law. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

WE HAD MINGLED FEELINGS yesterday as we gloated over the bright, shiny new dime presented to us by John D. Rockefeller. The morning papers said the U. S. treasury is five hundred million dollars in the red. As a hundred and ten per cent American we felt it our duty to send the new dime to the treasury; it would help Uncle Sam out just that much, anyhow. Then we read that over a thousand million dollars in gold had been withdrawn from the U. S. during the last four weeks and shipped abroad. That scared us. We got afraid that at that rate we wouldn't have much gold lying around loose before long. Silver is looking up. Our little, new, bright, shiny John D. Rockefeller is silver after all. And if we ship out all our gold we'll fall back on silver for money. Of course, right now, in lots of places they've fallen back on wheat, corn, eggs, chickens, and things like that as a medium of exchange, but we'd hate to walk into a loop shop and say we'll trade 'em a couple of eggs and a head of cabbage for a chocolate soda. Besides, we hate to carry eggs around in our pockets; we always forget and sit down on 'em. So, on the sober second thought, we decided to hang on to the bright, new, shiny John D. Rockefeller dime a while longer. It may come in handy this winter.

Ho Modernity—step along.
May even wilder be your song.
With new attire and new events,
Tickle the ribs of the firmaments,
Nor heed the balance in the bank,
Sifting the chaff of the Great God Swank,
Moving to the tempo of the Rhapsody in Blue,
(And how are all your people, Mr. Jean Patou?)
Let's have some expert latter day laughter,
May Peter Arno grow even dafter,
May Fred Astaire dance even swifter,
We all need a bit of a mental snifter.

Ho Modernity—step along.
May even wilder be your song.

THE NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY authorities are quite distressed because Mr. Capone always attends their football game and roots for the team. They have quite pointedly intimated to Mr. Capone that he is not invited to attend the game this afternoon. But, goodness! Mr. Capone won't mind. If he waited to be invited before he went anywhere he wouldn't have all that money the government says he's got.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION has barred any more scrip to the teachers until December. More tough luck for the teachers; they can't even paper their dining rooms now.

THE NAVY BUDGET has been trimmed down sixty-one million dollars' worth of ships and a lot of fighting ships will be left tied at the docks and four thousand sailors will be given the gate. And just as this is all nicely fixed something is seen away out over the Pacific that looks very much like a war cloud. Well, anyhow, if a foreign army tries to land on our shores we'll have to fall back on the rum runners; we've got plenty of them.

THE BIG DOINGS next week at Yorktown remind us that while Lord Cornwallis may have had a pretty tough time while he was there he didn't have to eat the hot dogs they sell to the tourists nowadays there nor drink what they call coffee nor jolt his auto over the washboard roads. Or maybe Yorktown was the same then as now, for Cornwallis was so sick he couldn't even attend his own surrender, but had to ship his sword and regrets to Mr. Washington by parcel post.

STARTLING INFORMATION in yesterday's news-sheets: Sen. Borah collected $4 in cash for being a witness in a federal case in New York. Bet we know why Sen. Borah collected his four dollars; he's going to get a haircut. A haircut costs just about that in New York.

WHIM.

Some men would haunt the valleys,
But I would roam the hills
Where first the wind at dawning
The sails of morning fills.

To start day's galleons moving
That moored upon the height
And now, royals set, drift with the tide
From out the bourne of night.

As on high seas the sailors chant,
On high hills let me sing,
My voice drowns in the valleys,
Up here its echoes ring.

Ascend, ascend the heights of land
And there to meet the day.
Some men prefer the valleys,
But that is not my way.

AND WHEN the trial started we thought they had everything on Al from the responsibility of starting the great war to causing the big earthquake in Japan, to say nothing of last summer's drought, and the present depression, the reduction of the dole in England, the Republican tariff, and the low price of wheat. How differently things turn out from what we expect!

A MESSAGE from Geneva yesterday said that when the American delegate, Prentiss Gilbert, took his seat in the League of Nations, which is going to consider the Sino-Japanese mess, "he looked extremely nervous." BRINGING HOME ANOTHER STRAY DOG

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 17, 1915.

LONDON. — The Austro-German forces are striving to complete and tighten the steel circle they have already drawn around Serbia. Bloody fighting raged north, south, east and west. Allied troops are being rushed from Saloniki to aid the Serbians in battling the invaders. The Serbian report of the day's fighting says that all Austro-Germish attacks on the Ovenovatz-Belgrade-Semendria front have been repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy. The German statement says that Field Marshal von Mackensen with his army group is making further progress. A Saloniki dispatch says that heavy cannonading is reported about Dorian, southeastern Serbia. The Serbians are said to have forced the Bulgarians to retire.

BERLIN.—The war office announced that the Germans have reconquered the positions gained by the French and English in their great offensive, referring to the allies' recent drive in northern France and Belgium.

PETROGRAD.—British submarines operating in the Baltic sea have sunk five German transports and forced another ashore, according to a Russian official statement.

ROME.—Heavy fighting has been raging for three days on the entire Austro-Italian front.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 17, 1901.

ROME.—The notorious brigand, Musselino, has been captured after fierce resistance to a band of soldiers at Urbino. He had long terrorized Calabria and is credited with having committed twenty-five murders. Because of sympathy shown him by the peasantry, he had always escaped capture despite the immense reward offered for his arrest. His outlaw career began two years ago when he was liberated from what he considered unjust imprisonment. He vowed to kill fifteen witnesses who were responsible for his conviction, and he is said to have actually killed twelve of them.

CHICAGO.—Ninety employés who are small stockholders in the Illinois Central railroad attended the annual meeting and were entertained by President Stuyvesant Fish. Along with Mr. Fish, John Jacob Astor, and other men of millions were these employés, including section bosses, who by long years of hard work have saved enough money to buy a share or two of stock.

MILWAUKEE.—A. B. Stickney, president of the Chicago Great Western railroad, in an address before the American Bankers' association, urged radical reform of the banking system. Secretary of the Treasury Lyman J. Gage commended Mr. Stickney on his position.

EDITORIAL.—It has been assumed that Mr. Scoville, Guiteau's brother-in-law and attorney, honestly believes him to be insane. In the outset he asserted this conviction and declared that he would not otherwise undertake the defense of the assassin. He further declared that he would not interpose any technical defense whatever, but would rest the case on the bare plea of insanity. As to this latter declaration, he has broken his word to the public. He now denies the jurisdiction of the court and in a more flagrant manner breaks his promise by denying that Guiteau killed the President! He proposes to prove that the wound inflicted by Guiteau was not fatal, but that the surgeons killed the President. We submit that these pleas show clearly that Mr. Scoville has at least a doubt of the truth of his own theory, so confidently and so frequently put forth, that his brother-in-law is crazy.

NEW YORK.—Every available inch of room in Steinway hall was occupied at the meeting held as a sort of formal reception to Thomas P. O'Connor, M. P., of Galway, Ireland, and Dr. Dillon Egan, who appear in this country on a special mission as representatives of the Land league in Ireland. Those present paid 25 cents each for the privilege of shouting themselves hoarse in their enthusiasm over the appearance of the two noted patriots. Mrs. Parnell, mother of Charles Stewart Parnell, the Irish leader recently arrested and now in prison, attended the meeting.

THE COST OF HIGHWAYS.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—One of your readers writes this morning with considerable indignation because it has been proposed that money from the gasoline tax be diverted to other purposes. Apparently he is greatly misinformed about the present tax situation. The money contributed by automobile owners in the form of fees and taxes for highway construction and maintenance is only a small portion of the total which the government spends for that purpose. In the year 1929 a total of $1,646,030,433, was spent on highways. Of this amount only 42 per cent was contributed by automobile owners in the form of gasoline taxes and vehicles taxes, leaving the sum of $958,300,981 to be paid by general taxpayers. Is it any wonder that real estate owners cannot pay their taxes? In order for automobile owners to bear their proper share of the cost of highway construction and maintenance the gasoline tax should be raised to about 7 cents a gallon. This should be done not only in Illinois but in every state. This would relieve real estate owners of a burden which is entirely unjust. The gasoline tax funds should also pay the entire cost of all railroad grade separations. Part of this money could also be used as a refund to property owners for excessive taxes which they have paid in the past. It may be seen that your reader has no ground at all for his contention.

CARL L. HALLBERG.

THE BOMBS.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—During Thompson's régime all of the bombings were said to have been due to his lack of efficiency, laxness of all his departments, and an indifferent attitude toward gangdom. What a laugh! Recently there have been only eleven bombings. This has not included the number that have failed to explode. Of course it is to be taken for granted that our mayor is so busily engaged in administering the wants and needs of the people of Chicago that he is not cognizant of the fact that there were eleven theaters bombed. No doubt our mayor is so busy raiding burlesque shows and bookmakers that he hasn't found time for the investigation of bombings. O, well, our "Scotland Yard" will be after them soon. H. G. B.

THE TOLL.

CHANGE OF VENUE.

Kankakee, Ill., Oct. 8.—I read with a great deal of interest your editorial entitled "Abuse of Venue" in last Thursday's TRIBUNE, and it appears to me that you have overlooked the statute relative thereto as amended and in force July 1, 1929. The statute [Cahill's Illinois Revised Statutes, 1931, chap. 146, par. 21] is as follows:

"When the cause for a change of venue is the prejudice of the judge or any two of them against the defendant or his attorney, the petition shall be accompanied by the affidavits of the defendant and his attorney, stating that they believe the judge, or any two of them, as the case may be, are so prejudiced against the applicant or his attorney that he cannot have a fair and impartial trial, and thereupon the case may be tried by any other of the Circuit judges of the circuit in which the case is pending, and the venue shall not be changed from the county in which the indictment is found or the information is filed in such case."

I am of the opinion that the legislature only intended that "the motion should be accompanied by the affidavits of the defendant and his attorney where the ground was the prejudice of the judge against the attorney. Nevertheless, the statute is clear that the motion can be granted only where the motion is accompanied by the affidavits of both the defendant and his attorney, regardless of whether the alleged prejudice is against the defendant or his attorney.

NEW ENGLAND COMPLACENCY.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 1.—I wish to thank you for the excellent editorials you are running on the subject of taxation. This is one of the most vital issues before the public today. Please keep on with the good work. I have tried to rouse the Boston papers, but only the Herald seems to take this subject seriously. The New England complacency is amazing.

Again this humble, overburdened taxpayer thanks you. IRWIN SPEAR.

A GALLANT RESCUE.

Maywood, Ill., Oct. 11.—I am still waiting for that editorial in praise of the despised British sailors who saved the American hero and heroine, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lindbergh, so promptly. If it were not for them they, according to the account in your own paper, would undoubtedly have been drowned.

YALE HEAD ASKS BIRTH CONTROL BEFORE DOCTORS

Angell Assails Shylocks Among Physicians.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 16.—[Special.]—Dr. James R. Angell, president of Yale university, warned against the "dubious restrictions" tending to cripple the essential value of medical men in an address tonight at the closing session of the congress of the American College of Surgeons.

Voicing a layman's plea for birth control, Dr. Angell spoke of the soundar notions of hygiene, both physical and mental and visioned a day when the sheer bulk of human bodily ailments will be enormously reduced.

Disapproves Criticisms.

"What genetics may do to breed out poor strains and so further diminish needless human misery," said Dr. Angell, "no one can predict—but it is unthinkable that reasonable, but drastic measures will not be found to diminish the number of births of the seriously unfit, to say nothing of controling birth in excess of the possibilities of a well conditioned population."

Dr. Angell expressed disapproval of the "deluge of criticism poured out upon the medical profession," and warned against "compulsory methods designed to bring about changes in method of practice."

"We know," said the Yale president, "that some medical men are ruthless in their charges for service, making Shylock look like a pure philanthropist; that fee splitting still goes on; that needless operations and probably useless but expensive treatments are ordered by some surgeons and physicians; that the shyster is abroad in the land and that the patent medicine business still is flourishing, thanks largely to human credulity, human imagination, and the assistance of a sometimes venal press.

Competent Medical Service.

"Whether for any or all of such difficulties the cure is to be found in state controlled medicine, in industrial and health insurance methods, in cooperative clinics, or in some other devices aimed at bringing competent medical service within reach of every citizen, at a price he can afford, it remains absolutely and irrefutably true, to use the words of one of your own distinguished members, that "any plan which lessens responsibility of the competent physician, or denies him the rewards of individual effort and superior ability, will ultimately be detrimental to public welfare."

Dr. Frederic A. Besley of Chicago, presiding at the industrial medicine conference, surveyed the swift growth of the movement for protection of workers and forecast universal acceptance of the principle.

Chicagoan Is Honored.

Dr. Angell's addressed closed an evening devoted to honoring physicians and surgeons of both this and other countries for outstanding work.

One of those honored was Dr. Franklin H. Martin of Chicago, director general of the College of Surgeons, who received the order of the Crown of Italy and the title "commendatore" on the order of Premier Mussolini in the presence of his fellow surgeons in the grand ballroom of the hotel.

GIRL CONVICTED AS MURDER AID IN TORCH CASE

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—Dale Keller, 25, of Ypsilanti, knew her sweetheart, Fred Smith, was guilty in the Ypsilanti torch murders and shielded him afterward, a Circuit court jury found today, bringing in a verdict of guilty against the girl. She was tried as an accessory after the murder of Harry Lore, one of the four young persons killed and cremated by Smith and his companions. The jury, bringing the verdict in with a recommendation of leniency, deliberated an hour and fourteen minutes.

Miss Keller was arrested two days after the murders. She had washed Smith's blood stained clothing, and hidden him in the home of the late Judge Darwin Z. Curtiss at Ypsilanti. She was a niece of the judge, and heir to his estate. She attempted to establish an alibi for Smith, whose blind mother refused to be a party to the scheme.

75 from La Salle County Indicted on Dry Charge

The federal grand jury yesterday returned indictments, charging violation of the prohibition law, against 75 residents of La Salle county. Most of the defendants are residents of Streator, Ottawa, La Salle, Peru and Seneca. The grand jury action was the result of a series of raids in July.

FUGITIVE IS CAPTURED.

Boston, Ill., Oct. 16. — (AP) — Herbert Cooleby, 31, who escaped from the state prison at Canyon City, Colo., June 5 last, was arrested today when he returned to his home at Royalton. He was serving a term for robbery, from Denver county.

"END TAX STRIKE AND PAY US," IS TEACHERS' PLEA

blame them for reluctance to pour money into a barrel without assurance when it will come out."

The union adopted a plan for financial relief presented by Robert C. Moore, secretary of the Illinois State Teachers' association. It approves the idea of one assessor for Cook county, and a revision board of three, of which the assessor would be a member. It urges new sources of revenue for the state school fund, including luxury taxes. It suggests that it may be necessary to fund the present indebtedness of the schools by a bond issue.

The North Side Meeting.

The north side teachers at their meeting in Senn High school organized on the same basis as the south side teachers, who have held meetings in Hyde Park High school. W. R. Hornbaker, principal of Darwin school, was elected chairman.

The idea of closed schools on Nov. 1 was brought up by Clyde A. Crowley of Senn. His remarks were cheered.

"We want money and we want it immediately," said Mr. Crowley. "One plan is simple, that if on Nov. 1 the board of education finds it impossible to pay us some of our salaries, we ask that as a courtesy to us, the board close the schools and give us opportunity to cope with our grocery and rent bills.

"There's no idea of a strike. But if the board were to close the schools it would bring our plight before the people."

SCRIP HELD ILLEGAL

Circuit Judge Philip J. Finnegan ruled yesterday that approximately $10,000,000 worth of scrip which the school board has issued is illegal. He announced that he will grant a temporary injunction restraining the board from issuing any more.

JUDGE FINNEGAN.

In addition, Judge Finnegan retained jurisdiction in the matter and continued the injunction case until Dec. 1. That action, attorneys for the school board held, makes it practically impossible for them to appeal.

Although the judge ruled that the scrip is without value he pointed out that the teachers and other creditors of the school board still hold a valid claim for the amounts accepted in scrip.

Teachers Bring Suit.

The bill for an injunction was filed by David Rosenheim, a taxpayer, and Mary E. Abbe, a taxpayer and public school teacher, but was inspired by Miss Margaret Haley, business agent of the Chicago Teachers federation. Attorneys James A. O'Callaghan, Allen Carter, and L. T. Greenacre appeared for the plaintiffs.

In his opinion granting the injunction, Judge Finnegan gave the board of education credit for adopting what, in its judgment, was the best plan of paying its employés and other creditors who had received no money since last April. But then he went on to state:

Holds Board Exceeds Power.

"The power and authority of the board of education to issue warrants in anticipation of taxes, when it complies with the statute, cannot be questioned. I believe the statute intends, and surely public policy demands, that they should not be issued and delivered except for cash. Certainly the law does not contemplate their issuance for the purpose of pledging, hypothecating or mortgaging them, or using them as collateral for the issuance of 'participation certificates,' or indebtedness or evidences of debt, or placing them in trust.

"The board of education has no authority to issue 'participation certificates' or certificates of indebtedness to creditors. The parties who have accepted them are left to their original claims against the board and should look to the board for payment. I believe that when the financial condition of the board is again made normal they will be promptly paid."

Scrip to Be Redeemed.

In his opinion Judge Finnegan said that on Dec. 1 he will determine whether the injunction should be dissolved or made permanent. He ordered that the attorneys for the plaintiffs and Attorneys Thomas V. Sullivan and Frank Righeimer, representing the school board, appear before him at that time, prepared to inform him what steps have been taken to pay employés and other creditors.

There is no occasion for apprehension on the part of persons who now hold scrip, in the opinion of Charles E. Gilbert, secretary of the school board. "Unquestionably," he said, "the board will eventually redeem the outstanding scrip. The current market for the scrip may be injured by the decision, but without a doubt the claims will be honored as soon as the school board gets the money."

BOOKS

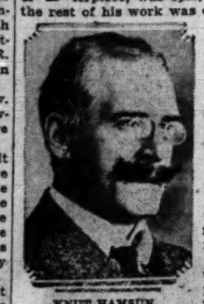
Knut Hamsun's Novel Lacking in Comic Flair

Though "August" Really Is Droll Hero.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"August," by Knut Hamsun. [Coward McCann.] Published today.

A CRITIC once said of Knut Hamsun's fiction that "The Growth of the Soil," his masterpiece, was epic, but that all the rest of his work was ethnic. That was so exact a description of the difference between that superb novel and almost everything else that has reached us from his pen that I never have forgotten it.



KNUT HAMSUN.

"August" takes its place with the other Hamsun novels, not with "The Growth of the Soil." Its interest is certainly more ethnic than anything else. It is for the picture of life in a tiny Norwegian fishing village rather than as a canvas of humanity itself that "August" leads the reader from paragraph to paragraph of its 441 pages. "The Growth of the Soil" was a tale of Norway, but it might have been the epic of man's struggle with the soil in Timbuctoo or South Carolina or Devonshire, in all of its implications. Nowhere but in Polden or another sleepy fishing village on the north coast of Norway could the story in "August" have taken place. In fact, "August" is so very ethnic at times it gets a little dull. It may present photographically sensitized records of such village life, but it is heavy going at times.

It is the story of a rogue, a tale which should be gay, and it is written by a man who has not the gay touch. Hamsun is no humorist. His hand is heavy at foolery. You expect lightness from him no more than you expect it from his fellow countryman, Ibsen. When he attempts it, it just doesn't come off.

"August" has an amusing idea as its reason for being. It records the return of that doughty wanderer to his home town and his attempts to make his town understand what the outside world is doing—his open hearted benefaction of the town and all of its inhabitants, his belief in the future of the village as a great industrial center, his maneuvering to start a bank, a herring meal factory, a general building boom, the raising of tobacco. . . . His ideas are grandiose and his methods unselfish and without reward to himself, except in that self-satisfaction which comes to some people through being the czar of the neighborhood.

"You certainly do like to get mixed up with life," says his friend Edevart to him, and in getting mixed up with every phase of life in the village August tastes the sweetest draught of life.

August himself, apart from his ambitions for his home town, is a comic character of parts, for he is a sort of local Baron Munchausen. He has followed the seven seas. He has had adventures in every one of the four corners of the globe. And the adventures that he hasn't had his fertile brain can picture anyhow. His tales are rarely told with the same details, but an artist is no plagiarist, even of his own stuff. He can create something new whenever circumstances demand.

If you read "Vagabonds" you know August well—August and his friend Edevart, who speaks only when he is spoken to and then only rarely. They were two of the characters in that book. August is the hero without rivals in this one.

According to all laws of the writing Medes and Persians "August" ought to be a thoroughly alluring tale. August himself has all that the most demanding reader could ask of a hero. The situations actually are very funny. The book ought to be one of those light tales that give you hours of sheer joy.

'APHRODITE IN AULIS' ANCIENT IN SETTING, MODERN IN WORDS

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.—George Moore's "Aphrodite in Aulis" has just been published here in the uniform edition of his works. This is not its first appearance, because it was published for collectors in a strictly limited edition some months ago. But the book contains a preface in which some of Mr. Moore's troubles while writing it are indicated. He was ill. It was necessary for him to undergo an operation. Like Honore Balzac, who was dying, and who demanded time to finish his last work, Mr. Moore pleaded for delay. But the words would not "stick" together, he says. He was in despair. However, in the end all was well, and "Aphrodite in Aulis" will be included in the canon by future generations. It is curiously like "A Conversation in Ebury Street," but the scene is set in the Greece of pre-Christian times, and strange things happen upon every page. I was amused to find that in Aulis they had the equivalent of a popular modern saying. When they wish to express assent they remark, "Thou hast said it!"

GEORGE MOORE.

Many will have noted the amusing inscriptions written in gift copies of H. G. Wells' books disposed of at the sale of Arnold Bennett's library. It may not be generally known that Mr. Wells is exceptionally lavish in his presentation copies, insisting that these [contrary to the general rule] should be unlimited in number. And he inscribes with unfailing ingenuity, sometimes adding little drawings, always illustrating that kindness and affectionateness which those who know Mr. Wells only as a teacher and a prophet cannot imagine.

Although Mr. Wells, Mr. Shaw, and Mr. Galsworthy have little enough in common, they have this trait of great kindness and good nature. In Mr. Galsworthy's case readers who sense his humanitarianism will be conscious of the fact; but Mr. Shaw and Mr. Wells have such an effect upon the minds of their admirers and dislikers that I doubt if the truth generally is realized.

Mr. Wells' new and monumental work is being delayed, although it has for some time been completed; and the author is already engaged upon its successor. His energy remains marvelous; and he undertook just before his departure for America, on behalf of the British Broadcasting corporation, the organization of a series of talks in which leading thinkers will say what they would do if they suddenly became dictators of the world's fortunes.

Reader May Yawn as Author Jokes on Balkans

The trouble with "Trouble in the Balkans" [Dial], by W. O. McGeehan, a New York newspaper man, is that apparently the author tried too hard to be humorous. His book yields yawns instead of chuckles. We revel in a really jolly book and so we picked up Mr. McGeehan's volume hopefully, especially after reading a press notice enclosed. We grew skeptical after the first chapter, but waded stoically and smilelessly through. But we can't honestly advise any one to take the trouble to read it.

Admirers Say George Dillon Recalls Keats

But One Thinks His Verse More Austere.

BY MARION STROBEL.

"The Flowering Stone," by George Dillon [Viking].

THE critics who compared George Dillon's first lyrics to those of Keats, the connoisseurs of poetry who praised them, the college boys and girls who quoted them, should hasten to buy this new volume, "The Flowering Stone."

GEORGE DILLON.

For though many of Keats' lyrics are exclamatory and diffuse, and Dillon's are concise and austere, they still have, in common, a preoccupation with the eternities of death and beauty, a glamorous vocabularies made up of words as colorfully cadenced as pebbles dropping into deep water, classical rhythms—and distinct individuality.

It is, indeed, because George Dillon's individuality has, in this new volume, become so much more pronounced that critics, who say that he has qualities in common with Keats, should also recognize that his voice is distinguishable both from the poetry of the past and that of the present. It is his own.

To be sure, his most successful poems are in the traditional form—his rhythms are most authentic when least venturesome—and for that very reason it is the more remarkable that he has been able to make such fresh sounds with the old familiar instruments. This freshness is, I think, due to his astonishing ability to personify the abstract.

Subjects like beauty, life, death, that are apt to be ambiguously thought of and vaguely written about, and still more vaguely apostrophized, become, when Mr. Dillon is the author, as tangible as the dining room table.

He feeds you quite simply with the abstract fare of the spirit, and what formerly were to you meaningless profundities have taste and substance. In his long group of poems, "Anatomy of Death," he has made death as exciting as birth. The last lyric in this series is as lovely as any I have read in the English language.

As for the intellectual content of the poems, it is interesting to note that Mr. Dillon's lyrics rest solidly on a modern scientific conception of the universe. There is no evasion of facts, no catering to old superstitions or to poetic conventions. He is, especially in his treatment of sex, natural and honest.

In the last few years there have been three memorable sonnet sequences: one written by the late Elinor Wylie, another by Edna St. Vincent Millay; and Mr. Dillon's sonnet sequence, "Address to the Doomed." Compare these three sequences and it will be seen that, within even the strictest poetic form, the individuality of each poet has been preserved. They are all three brilliant technically, but Wylie's effect is achieved by an intricate balance of words, Millay's by overemphasis, Dillon's by understatement.

At 24 George Dillon is still a resident of Chicago. He has received many prizes—the most recent from the Chicago Foundation for Literature last April.

To the Man Who Knows Its Origin Every Word Presents a Picture

The Punishment of Tantalus Is Immortalized in Our Word

Tantalize

Greek mythology records the story of King Tantalus who seriously offended the gods and was punished in an extraordinary manner. He was placed in the midst of a lake whose waters reached his chin, but receded whenever he attempted to allay his thirst. Over his head hung branches laden with choice fruit, which likewise receded whenever he stretched out his hand in an attempt to satisfy his hunger. Tantalus became the symbol of teasing and torment, and his name is the origin of our word tantalize. When we know the source of the word, what a clear picture we have of its meaning! This is the way in which you come to understand the background and essential meanings of English words when you look them up in

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

RICH SPINSTER'S ESTATE SHARED BY 105 LEGATEES

Large Portion of Mahoney Wealth to Church.

A $500,000 estate which grew from "America's most valuable farm" was bequeathed to nearly 150 legatees yesterday by the will of Miss Mary Mahoney, 71 years old, who died on Oct. 8 in her home at 116 Sheridan road, Kenilworth, on part of the original farm. The will was filed for probate with Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Horner.

Miss Mahoney was the last surviving child of Donald and Bridget Mahoney, who came to Chicago from Ireland in the 1850's and soon after, for $1,750, bought a thirty-four acre farm fronting on Lake Michigan. As the years passed and population grew the Mahoney farm became famous for its cornfields in the midst of exclusive suburban communities.

Part Now "No-Man's-Land."

In 1922 Miss Mahoney, her sister, Annie, and her brother, William, both of whom died before her death, sold twenty-seven acres of the land for $225,000. That tract is now "no-man's-land" between Wilmette and Kenilworth. The remaining seven acres Miss Mahoney bequeathed to the village of Kenilworth for a park, to bear the family name.

She made $440,000 in specific cash bequests; the larger part to Catholic charities, but included more than 100 individuals for sums ranging from $100 to $1,000.

In addition to friends, the list includes a number of workmen, gardeners, carpenters, and others, to whom Miss Mahoney left small sums "in appreciation of good work." She left $1,000 to each of twenty cousins. St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church in Wilmette was left $17,300 to provide weekly masses for the Mahoney family, and approximately $10,000 was bequeathed to fifteen other churches for masses.

Gifts to Catholic Charities.

Among the larger charitable bequests were $75,000 to St. Joseph's church, $50,000 to St. Francis' hospital in Evanston, $20,000 to St. Theresa's hospital in Waukegan, $10,000 to the Sisters of Christian Charity in Chicago, $10,000 to St. Athanasius' church in Evanston, $20,000 to the Society of the Divine Word at Techny, half for the home for the blind and half for the home for old people; $25,000 to the Guardian Angel German Catholic Orphan society, and $5,000 each to Our Lady of Mercy mission, the Evanston hospital, the Little Sisters of the Poor, St. Vincent's orphanage, and St. Mary's home for children.

HIGH COURT TO HEAR BROTHERS' APPEAL TODAY

Assistant State's Attorneys C. Wayland Brooks and John Holman left last night for Springfield, where this morning they will appear before the Illinois Supreme court to present argument in the case of Leo V. Brothers, convicted of the murder of Alfred Lingle.

Brothers has appealed from the verdict of the jury which last spring, in the court of Judge Joseph Sabath, found Brothers guilty.

Defense Attorney James C. O'Brien also left for Springfield and will present his argument in Brothers' behalf. Both sides have filed briefs setting up the law in the case, and after the arguments the case will be ready for the high court's decision.

HERMAN CUSHMAN IS DEAD; RETIRED OWNER OF STORES

Waupaca, Wis., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—Herman Cushman, retired Chicago chain store owner, died suddenly last night in his home, Strongwood cabin, Lake Nestling, near here. Funeral services will be held here tomorrow and at Graceland chapel, Chicago, Monday.

Mr. Cushman was 68 years old, a native of Buckfield, Me., and a descendant of early Plymouth settlers. He entered the shoe business in 1883, retiring several years ago while vice president of the A. S. Kreider company. In addition he owned the wholesale shoe house bearing his name. He made his home in Barrington until two years ago, when he moved here.

Surviving Mr. Cushman are one daughter, Mrs. Arthur Bradley of Barrington, and two sons, Clifford and Ralph Cushman of Glencoe, Ill.

OFFER BRITISH HOME RENT FREE TO SAVE TAXES

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Oct. 16.—As a resolution of the country house problem during the present hard times, Sir Richard and Lady Muriel Paget have offered the use of Cranmore hall in Mendiphills rent free to tenants who will pay the taxes and cost of upkeep, estimated at $1,500 a year.

"We are doing it as an economy measure," Lady Muriel explained. "If people would only do the same with their estates they might tide over this difficult time without throwing their staffs out of work. Land is so heavily taxed that something has to be done."

FAMOUS LINER IN PORT AFTER FINAL VOYAGE

New York, Oct. 16.—[Special.]—The steamship George Washington of the United States lines completed her last trans-Atlantic voyage today. She steamed proudly up the harbor, proceeding to her pier at Hoboken, there to end her long career on the Atlantic—a career in which she played an important part in world affairs.

Once the pride of the German merchant marine and later hailed as the largest merchant vessel flying the American flag, the George Washington, now twenty-three years old, has been pronounced obsolete.

The old liner has been transporting passengers to and from Europe under the American flag for ten years. She was seized from German owners when the United States entered the world war, and two years ago was sold to the United States lines.

The George Washington had the distinction of bearing as a passenger the first President of the United States ever to go abroad while in office. He was Woodrow Wilson. Both the trips he made to France for the purpose of preparing for and taking part in the Versailles peace conference were on the George Washington, then a United States army transport.

Joan Blondell of Films to Marry a Cameraman

PEDESTRIAN IS KILLED BY AUTO; TOLL NOW 984

Raymond Asplind, 50 years old, 3307 Maypole avenue, a mechanic, was fatally injured last evening when he was struck by an automobile while crossing the pavement in front of 1459 West 35th street. He was taken to the office of Dr. E. R. Duff, 1118 East 35th street, where he was pronounced dead. The driver, Martin Basterba, 4538 South Crawford avenue, surrendered to Sergt. Charles Beatty of the stockyards police. This death and one other brought the year's toll for Cook county to 985. The other victims:

Harold Davis, 4 years old, 5060 Georgia street, Gary, was killed yesterday when he was struck by an automobile on 49th avenue there. The driver, Miss Ruth Doll of Lowell, Ind., a school teacher, was released in $2,000 bonds on a charge of manslaughter.

Albert Lucas, 6 years old, of 42 Green Bay avenue, Calumet City. Fatally injured yesterday when he was struck by an automobile driven by Charles M. Ridge, 28 years old, of 10 Ann street, Lansing, at Michigan City road and Burnham avenue. A few minutes before, a tire had blown out on the car in which the boy and his father were riding. The father stopped to change the tire. Albert stood in the road and was hit. He died in St. Margaret's hospital, Hammond.

Allen Ferris, 55 years old, of Chicago, was killed late yesterday in an automobile collision at Windsor, Ont., Canada. His niece, Mrs. Ainslee Borland, in whose machine he was a passenger, was slightly hurt. The car of the Chicagoans was struck by the auto driven by Mrs. Jessie Johnson of Highland Park, Mich. Mrs. Johnson was held in bail of $5,000 on a criminal negligence charge.

Minnie K. Moore Funeral Today; Veteran Teacher

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon for Mrs. Minnie Kingsley Moore, 4505 North Laporte avenue, Mayfair, retired veteran teacher of the Logan school. Mrs. Moore was active in welfare work. She was a member of the board of the Chicago Women's Shelter and a member of the board of the Methodist Episcopal Old People's Home. She served 23 years as a teacher in the Logan school. Mrs. Moore was 64 years old. She is survived by her husband.

MINER KILLED BY SLATE FALL.

Lincoln, Ill., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—Walter Wonsavage, 55, a miner, was killed when caught beneath a fall of slate in the Brewerton Coal corporation mine today.

TWO CHICAGO RADIO STATIONS REMOVED; GARY IS THE GAINER

Washington, D. C., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—Two Chicago radio stations, WIBO and WPCC, were removed from the air today by the federal radio commission in its effort to equalize the distribution of broadcasting facilities among the states.

The commission granted the application of station WJKS of Gary, Ind., for the facilities of the Chicago stations. In so doing it overruled the recommendation of its chief examiner, Ellis A. Yost, who urged that the Gary application be denied:

Today's action is the first drastic step taken by the commission to carry out its redistribution policy adopted a year ago. The ruling does not go into effect until after twenty days, during which the aggrieved stations may have recourse to the District of Columbia court of appeals.

Indiana is more than two units, or the equivalent of that number of 2,000 watt stations operating full time, under its quota. Illinois is rated by the commission as the state most over quota in the Union, having more than a dozen units in excess of its pro rata share.

KILLS MOTHER OF BABY, THEN SHOOTS SELF

Mrs. Concetto Manfgrasso, 36 years old, the mother of a baby three weeks old, was shot and killed yesterday in Indiana Harbor by John Lombardi, 55 years old, with whom she had been living until the birth of her child. Lombardi then shot himself in the head and was taken to St. Catherine's hospital in East Chicago in a critical condition. The shooting took place in Lombardi's home, when Mrs. Manfgrasso went to get some clothing which she had left there.

FORFEITS BOND ON CHARGE OF SWINDLING GIRL

CRIMINAL COURT.

John Simmons, burglary, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary; Howard Thompson, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary, by Judge George Fred Rush.

Joseph Chudada, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in Pontiac reformatory; Albert Krizan, larceny, sentenced to 1 year in the Bridewell; Robert Connelly, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary; Sam Kretnick, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in Pontiac reformatory; George O'Brien and Nathan Brown, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary, by Judge Walter Stanton.

Bruce Edwards, 35 years old, 1722 East 70th street, failed to appear in the Felony court yesterday and Judge Samuel H. Trude ordered his $5,000 bond forfeited. He was charged with retaining $3,100 which he was supposed to have placed in a safety deposit vault for Miss Ruby Copeland, 25 years old, a teacher at the Martha Washington school in Abingdon, Va. It is said she expected him to marry her. Joseph L. McCarthy, former judge, was embarrassed when Edwards failed to appear because Judge Trude, at his request, had granted a continuance several days ago so that Edwards could have a new bond ready when he would be held to the grand jury.

ROBT. T. LINCOLN ESTATE VICTOR IN TAX APPEAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—Relief from the larger portion of a deficiency in estate taxes assessed against the estate of Robert Todd Lincoln, of Washington and Manchester, Vt., amounting to $135,269, was granted to the executors, Mary H. Lincoln and the American Security and Trust company today by the U. S. board of tax appeals. Mr. Lincoln was the son of Abraham Lincoln and was once president of the Pullman company. He died at Manchester July 26, 1926.

The government sought to collect an estate tax on $1,250,195, which represented the value of stocks, accumulated interest and dividends, transferred to Mrs. Lincoln as an absolute gift within two years of the time of his death; also on a joint bank account of $51,634 and on an automobile transferred to Mrs. Lincoln.

The tax board's decision, written by Miss Annabel Matthews, a former southern school teacher, who is a member of the board, held unconstitutional that portion of the estate tax law which provide sthat any gift made within two years of death is in contemplation of death and therefore taxable. The board held that taxes must be paid on the joint bank account and on the automobile.

At the time of the gifts Mr. Lincoln was 83 years old and his wife 80.

Prior to the gifts, it was stated, Mr. Lincoln had never made any large gift to his wife, although he had established trust funds in 1919 of about $1,000,000 each for their two daughters.

French Women for War on City Vice Districts

BORDEAUX, France, Oct. 16.—(AP)—The French League for Women's Rights at its annual national congress here today went on record in favor of the gradual suppression of protected vice in France. The delegates also demanded legislation permitting women to serve as judges. It also said only four countries in Europe, including France, now deny suffrage to women. Doris Stevens, American feminist leader, was unable to attend the conferences.

The Marriage Racket

By VINA DELMAR

SYNOPSIS.

Ilma Corbin and Don Philippe de Rodriguez, hoofers, with their pianist, Tom Libby, are in Thrace for a week's vaudeville engagement. A convention is being held in the city and the hotels are overflowing. Philippe grabs the first vacancy, Tom and Irma double a cot and Bill turns over his room to Irma. Bill invites Irma to a dinner party at the hotel, where she meets Wallace Graham, a widower. Wallace has a young daughter, Mildred, who has grown up under the supervision of her Aunt Tessie. Bill and Irma shower invitations on the pretty dancer. Wallace asks Irma to be his wife but his proposal to her is of a different nature. Irma quarrels with Philippe and quits the act. She marries Wallace and settles down to a dull existence with him. A baby son comes to compensate her for any flaws in the marriage system. The baby becomes the center of her universe. Wallace's lifelong ambition is a European voyage. A paid up insurance policy makes the trip possible. Irma reluctantly agrees to leave the baby. She is dreadfully upset by a letter received in Paris from Aunt Tessie. Wallace tries unsuccessfully to change their return passage to an earlier date. While dining with the Rileys, whom they'd met on the boat, the Wallaces meet Russell Byrnes, a wealthy bachelor. He has a cabin on a boat sailing in two days, which Irma persuades him to give Wallace.

INSTALLMENT XXIV.

MILDRED'S YOUNG MAN.

Mildred laughed and the same moment Aunt Tessie called them down to have some coffee. It was much later when the house was dark and Irma was lying within arm's reach of her baby that she remembered that Mildred had not answered her question. Was this Scott matter serious, she wondered. Irma had not the comfortable optimism that could pooh-pooh out of existence a matter just because it sounded ridiculous. In her short active life many ridiculous fancies had materialized into actual facts. It would just be another of life's little jokes if during their absence it had been Wallace's child who had needed attention while he haunted cathedrals and palaces content and assured that all was well at home.

Scott was, perhaps, a young man in love with love and Mildred was in love with eugenics. Good God, what a situation to come to. It took will power to keep her from awakening Wallace and saying to him, "Wake up. Your child is in danger of having a eugenic baby."

As a matter of fact it was Wallace who opened the subject the second Irma opened her eyes the next morning.

"Say, what's this about Mildred having a boy friend?" he demanded. "Did she say anything to you about it?"

"Yes. It seems that there is a gentleman in the offing."

"Aunt Tessie said he was a real nice young man around twenty-five," Wallace chuckled delightedly. "Can you imagine her capturing the interest of a fellow twenty-five?"

"Well, it's your business, Wallace, but I wouldn't be too glad. You see, a young twenty-five or six is interested in more than high school dances and basketball teams. When he picks a girl he's thinking of two things and one of them's marriage."

"My God, Irma, why don't you let your head up out of the sewer for a change?"

"All right. It's up. He's interested in only one thing, then. That's marriage. Does that please you better?"

Wallace didn't seem to. Wallace frowned and rearranged his pillow irritably.

"Is that your ultimatum, dear?"

"You're as transparent as a window, Irma. She's told you plenty. Come on, what did she tell you?"

"Oh, go ask her, Wallace."

"By God, I will," he said in the tone of a man who has determined to do a brave and quixotic deed. "I have a right to know what's transpired in my absence."

"Try and find out," Irma thought.

Wallace tried. There was no question about that. For an hour he and Mildred were closeted in her room. As Irma went about the business of unpacking she could hear their voices. Mildred's, even but faintly surprised at her father's sudden intrusion into her life. Wallace's, at first cheerfully authoritative but dropping swiftly into the familiar half-pleading, half-peevish tone which always characterized his conversations with Mildred.

He emerged rearranging his expression on Mildred's threshold. To his wife he must appear thoroughly satisfied with the information which his finesse and cleverness had torn from the secretive girl.

"Well, I know all about that now," he whispered to Irma.

"Do you, dear? That's good. What's the young man's last name?"

Wallace coughed. "I didn't ask her that," he admitted. "After all that's a minor matter. I'll see the young man tonight."

"O, have you sent for him?"

"Well, no, I didn't send for him. It seems that Aunt Tessie had said earlier in the week that Mildred could have him here tonight."

"I see."

Scott Avery turned out to be a depressingly sober young man, whose conventional exterior would frighten no father. True, he had a fine forehead, teeth that actually glittered with health and whiteness, and an earnest, keen pair of gray eyes, but there was nothing dashing or thrilling in his appearance. Mildred and he were completely poised and self-possessed in the presence of each other. There was no fluttering or nervousness which could be expected of a young couple at the male's first visit. The easy, matter of fact manner in which they accepted each other would suggest that this was Mildred and Scott's tenth wedding anniversary.

Irma saw at once that Wallace was going to be very much the father image. He would tell tireless, pointless anecdotes calculated to amuse these young men and probably wouldn't give the poor young devils a second which to do some good, competitive necking. Mildred, no doubt, would never forgive her for rushing Wallace home from Europe.

Dinner was very bad indeed. Rose on this special evening had quite outdone herself in the matter of drying out chicken and undercooking vegetables. Irma felt sorry for Mildred but her sympathy was wasted for both Scott and Mildred were still taking an interest in life and had not yet reached the day when there was nothing left but food to notice.

"What's your business, Mr. Avery?" Wallace asked.

"Why, I'm in the lab."

That was all that was necessary to turn Irma's mind away from the conversation which ensued. Everybody in Thrace knew about the, electrical laboratories of course. Four out of five men seemed to be associated with it. Why wouldn't Mildred's young man be in the lab? She should have known that at once. So fitting that he should spend his time with tubes, weird colored and fiendishly whirling super machines and all such inhuman contrivances. Wallace actually gave Mildred and Scott some time alone in the sun parlor but not before he had told Scott of Mr. Dreyfus' phenomenal rise in business, of his own minor but none-the-less considerable success and his private opinion of Mr. Coolidge.

Irma held a discreet silence with which he was able to convey a complete disapproval of all Wallace's philosophy and ideas without saddling herself with the onus of having disagreed with Mildred's father.

"A dumb young man," Wallace declared when he and Irma were alone. "Nothing to him. She's flattered because he's so much older in years."

"O, yeh," said Irma. "He's stupid like a serpent."

"Well, he's not bright. You couldn't call him bright, could you?"

"Time will tell, old dear."

When the youngsters had been in the sun parlor an hour Wallace found an excuse for entering. He found Scott sitting upon the divan reading from a thin, dog-eared book. Mildred ten feet away from him sat with closed eyes, head thrown back upon a cushion, listening with evident appreciation.

Wallace came out carrying a magazine that he hadn't at all wanted. He looked up and saw him shaking his head thoughtfully.

"Say, did fellows ever read poetry to you?" he asked.

"None of my fellows could read," Irma responded.

"No kidding; did they?"

She shook her head.

"Well, I used to read poetry to girls when I was a kid. But it was—I know—soft poetry. Sweet stuff."

"Silly stuff," Irma corrected.

"Yes. Well?"

"Well—," Wallace pointed to the door. "He's reading poetry to her and I caught a line as I went in. This was the line. Listen. 'Why does a horse snicker as he hauls the lawyer's bones?' What the hell kind of poetry is that?"

Irma laughed. "Well," she said, "I shouldn't say it was dangerous. He's not going to rouse a carnal appetite with a snickering hearse horse, would you say, Wallace?"

"But I don't understand what it means."

"Well, that's enough to make you hate it. Shall we go ask them to explain it?"

Wallace's face brightened. "Yes, let's ask them."

But a minute later all signs of brightness faded from Wallace's face. He had waved bridge away with a bored, white hand.

As Wallace and Irma returned to the living room they could hear Scott Avery's pleasant clear voice behind them reading to Mildred:

The boot maker,
The baker of Wheat,
The paper with Railroads and
The Nation's freight handler——"

I KNOW IT'S HARD TO GET. THIS IS THE THIRD DAY I'VE ASKED.
BUT IT'S HARDER THAN THAT FOR ME TO GET.
THAT'S ONE THAT OUR BIGGEST FINANCIERS AND ECONOMISTS HAVE BEEN TRYING TO ANSWER, SKEEZIX.
WHAT'S AN ECONOMIST, UNCLE WALT?
AN ECONOMIST IS A FINANCIER WITHOUT ANY MONEY.

Good Morning!

Believe me, it's worth an hour of time and anywhere from thirty-five cents to a dollar of any woman's money to hear Paul Lukas say "Darling!" [Only it's "DOLLING!" in his fascinating, accent-tinged pronunciation.]

Mr. Lukas has that which went a long way toward making Casanova, Byron, and Don Juan the men they were. His, the "zis and zat" that Anna Held used to sing about; the "It" of Elinor Glyn and the "subtle something" that "best seller" novelists roll like a sweet morsel under their—pens. All this, mind you, plus good looks and genuine acting ability. [Quite a man!]

In "The Beloved Bachelor" he has a sort of "Daddy Long Legs" rôle, in that his part calls for him to play guardian to a devastatingly pretty ward who calls him "Daddy," but is in no way related to him. How Michael Morda, sculptor, acquires the fair Mitzi, the picture will show you, together with a lot of things that lead to an ending which should send you purring from the theater.

You will like Dorothy Jordan as the ward, and be quite taken with Vivienne Osborne as a charming lady who, once, had almost become Mrs. Morda. [She looks like Billie Dove.] You'll adore watching Charles Ruggles as Jerry, a pal of Michael's, drink the fruit of the grape, and you'll have a heap of fun listening to his dissertations on his favorite fruit—and divers topics of intense interest to himself. Other players have been well chosen.

"The Beloved Bachelor" has quite a bit of plot to bless it, and some really laughable lines and situations that have been accorded good play by an able director.

I wonder—will "The Beloved Bachelor" make Mr. Lukas a star? SHOULD it, girls?

"THE HOMICIDE SQUAD."

THE CAST.

Louie.....Leo Carrillo
Capt. Buckley.....Noah Beery
Millie.....Mary Brian
Joe Riley.....Russell Gleason
Jimmy.....George Brent
Proctor.....Walter C. Percival
Hugo.....J. Carrol Naish

KIND: Gangster melodrama.
QUALITY: Good.
DIRECTION: Satisfactory.
PHOTOGRAPHY, SOUND, SETS, ETC.: Quite all right.
ACTING: Excellent. Leo Carrillo, as a master gangster, sleek, smiling, unscrupulous; Russell Gleason as a tool, and J. Carrol Naish as a craven rat who dies in squeaking terror at the hands of the associates on whom he has squealed, all give memorable performance. Noah Beery, for once on the side of law and order, plays a police captain acceptably.
STORY: There's considerable of a plot to this one. I won't give it away. Gangster films are, of necessity, so much alike anyway, that when one packs a bit of a surprise, that surprise should be left for screen revealing.
SUSPENSE: Considerable.
AUDIENCE APPEAL: Also considerable, because of the suspense and sure-fire acting.

See you tomorrow.

GERMAN PRINCE AT FORD PLANT; HE USES U. S. SLANG CORRECTLY

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 16.—(AP)—Getting out of bed before dawn five mornings a week to punch a time clock at the Ford Motor company plant has no terrors for Prince Louis Ferdinand von Hohenzollern, second son of the former crown prince of Germany.

"Why should I mind it? All factory workers do, it here, do they not?" he asks.

"Couldn't you call me 'Dr. Louis Ferdinand?'" he asked an interviewer. "I had to work for that degree."

Today he declined a dinner invitation because he previously had made a theater engagement with a mechanic in the automobile plant.

Louis Ferdinand admits he is anti-militaristic and feels "it is most unfortunate that people still want to fight each other."

"Everywhere I go," he said, "people ask 'who is that bird?'" My friends say 'that's Prince Louis Ferdinand, grandson of the former emperor of Germany.'

"'What's he doing here?' they ask.

"'He's a mechanic at Ford's.'

"And then they say, 'O, yeah?'"

Chicago Federation of Churches Wins Praise as Leader

First in service, economy and efficiency was the ranking given to the Chicago Church federation following a survey of twenty-six leading city federations. Walter R. Mee, executive secretary of the local organization, based that announcement on the findings of Dr. H. Paul Douglass in his book "Protestant Coöperation in American Cities." Dr. Mee's statement was made in his annual report to the federation. It will be found in the new Year Book of the Chicago Church Federation to be distributed as it comes from the press at the end of this month.

"Last year's report indicated that over twelve and one half million dollars had been devoted to church building enterprises in the Chicago area alone," Dr. Mee said. "While the specific figures for this year are much lower, nevertheless Protestant churches of this city have been planning ahead, and from all indications the total expenditures in this field will far surpass any previous record when our World's Fair opens its doors in 1933."

The executive secretary declared that the city-wide evangelistic campaign carried on in 1930 had given the churches in Chicago over 12,000 new members. Dr. A. Earl Kernahan was the director of that drive for new timber.

"In spite of economic distress and overwhelming calls on the public for money to be used in relief work, we have managed to close the year without a deficit," Dr. Mee asserted. He indicated, however, that of the major denominations contributing to the federation budget, the Congregationalists alone met their full obligations.

Cornwallis Joins Yankees, French in Fete

Glory Enough for All at Yorktown.

Yorktown, Va., Oct. 16.—(AP)—The glory that was Yorktown's, heralded as a triumph of the English people for the right of self government, was reviewed today in pageant and in story.

Among the thousands who came to participate in the four day sesquicentennial of the battle that ended the American revolution was Lord Cornwallis, descendant of the English earl whose forces surrendered to Washington and La Fayette 150 years ago.

"I feel that it would be as agreeable to him as it is delightful to me that a member of the family can be here today," Lord Cornwallis said. "War is behind; peace is in the future, let us hope, forevermore.

"To be compelled to yield to Gen. Washington in honorable defeat was no disgrace, and it was not so regarded by his countrymen in his day," Lord Cornwallis said. "We all recognize George Washington not only as the greatest man in the history of this continent but as one of the greatest men of the world."

He spoke at the dedication of a bust of his distinguished ancestor, dedicated by Virginia as a memorial to the affection for the other country. As the British flag was pulled aside to reveal the bust, it was Maj. Rochambeau, great-great-grandson by adoption of the noted French ally of Washington, who whirled about and came to full salute.

A short time later the friendship of the allies of 1781 was exemplified in a tremendous ovation accorded to Marshal Henri Petain as he arrived in state to be presented to the assembled thousands.

Recalling the famous words, "They shall not pass!" uttered in an hour of trial in the world war, United States Senator Claude A. Swanson, chairman of the national sesquicentennial commission, told the distinguished French soldier they would live forever as an ispiration to all men in war and in peace.

"The French mission that I head is overjoyed to commemorate the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Yorktown which represents one of the greatest events of modern times," Marshal Petain replied, speaking in his own language. He accepted a medal presented by the United States sesquicentennial commission with an expression of thanks.

Five governors from the original thirteen colonies delivered short addresses as they were welcomed by Gov. Pollard, while seven sent representatives to speak for them.

Adj. Gen. Davis of Pennsylvania brought a message from Gov. Pinchot that differed from those of others.

"In a land overflowing with milk and honey," the Pennsylvania governor said, "millions lack food. Our fight is not against princes and principalities; it is against hunger and cold and mammon and unrighteousness in high places."

Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, secretary of the interior, today dedicated as a national monument the Jamestown-Williamsburg-Yorktown area where the colonial period of America had its beginning and its ending.

"In commemorating this colonial period today," he said, "it is right that we should honor the great mother country of a century and a half ago, as well as those European countries contributing settlers to the original colonies. Out of these countries came the stock that gave us Washington, Jefferson, Franklin, Hamilton, and those courageous men and women who formed a nation."

Dr. Wilbur said the American revolution was just one phase of the long struggle of "obstinate, brave Englishmen to secure what they conceived to be their rights as men and as citizens."

Hoover to Use Battleship.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 16.—(AP)—Three guests will accompany President and Mrs. Hoover on their trip to the Yorktown celebration aboard the battleship Arkansas.

Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, wife of the secretary of the navy, and Admiral W. V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, and Mrs. Pratt will be the only guests aside from the White House attachés and newspaper men who usually accompany the President when he travels.

BEG YOUR PARDON

An item stated that funeral services for Edward C. Schweitzer, 619 Greenleaf avenue, Wilmette, will be held at 2 p. m. today from the chapel at 118 Greenleaf avenue, Wilmette. The correct address of the chapel is 1118 Greenleaf avenue.

WASHINGTON LETTER TO CORNWALLIS ON TERMS OF SURRENDER

The following letter, quoted from the Life of George Washington by John Marshall, first chief justice of the United States, was in reply to the offer of surrender by Lord Cornwallis. It is interesting in connection with the present celebration. The civilians mentioned were tories, afterwards allowed to go by ship to New York, then held by Sir Henry Clinton. The British would not concede Washington's titles, so he reciprocated.

The letter says:

"Headquarters before York,
18th October, 1781.

"My Lord: To avoid unnecessary discussions and delays I shall at once, in answer to your lordship's letter of yesterday, declare the general basis upon which a definitive treaty of capitulation must take place. The garrison of York and Gloucester, including the seamen, as you propose, will be received prisoners of war. The condition annexed of sending the British and German troops to the parts of Europe to which they respectively belong is inadmissible. Instead of this, they will be marched to parts of the country as can most conveniently provide for their subsistence; and the benevolent treatment of prisoners, which is invariably observed by the Americans, will be extended to them. The same honours will be granted to the surrendering army, as were granted to the garrison of Charleston.

"The shipping and boats in the two harbours, with all their guns, stores, tackling, furniture and apparel, shall be delivered in their present state to an officer of the navy appointed to take possession of them.

"The artillery, arms, accountrements, military chest, and public stores of every denomination, shall be delivered unimpaired, to the heads of departments to which they respectively belong.

"The officers will be indulged in retaining their side arms and the officers and soldiers may preserve their baggage and effects with this reserve, that property taken in the country will be reclaimed.

"With regard to the individuals in civil capacities whose interests your lordships wishes may be attended to, until they are more particularly described nothing definite can be settled.

"I have to add that I expect the sick and wounded will be supplied with their own hospital stores and attended by British surgeons particularly charged with care of them.

"Your lordship will be pleased to signify your determination either to accept or reject the proposals now offered. In the course of two hours from the delivery of this letter, that commissioners may be appointed to digest the articles of capitulation or a renewal of hostilities may take place.

"I have the honour to be, my lord, & etc.,

"GEORGE WASHINGTON."

A vigorous protest against the current revival of fashions of "the ridiculous Victorian age" in women's dress was made yesterday by Lucien Lelong, well known Paris designer of women's fashions, on his arrival in Chicago over the Century. M. Lelong is stopping at the Blackstone hotel.

"We should not get back to the old periods," Mr Lelong lamented. "I will not do it. The dresses I am designing now are innocent of the ruffles, elaborate draperies and heavy ornamentation which some designers are reviving.

"There is plenty of inspiration in modern life to draw from. Instead of there being nothing new under the sun, there are many new things under the sun. We should dress in keeping with our modern life. There is much that is beautiful around us. My dresses are going to have the simplicity that modern life expresses."

The woman of style was born that way, M. Lelong said. Whether she lives in London, Paris, New York or in any country of the world, a woman of chic is herself, and she is smart because she has the native talent to be smart, he said. However, a woman who is not born chic can acquire vast improvement, he explained.

Bridge Expert to Write Daily for The Tribune

Charles True Adams Will Start Tomorrow.

THE TRIBUNE today announces Charles True Adams as its contract bridge editor. Mr. Adams is the youngest of the recognized American authorities who formulated the new official system which is sweeping the country. By many he is regarded as the most brilliant of them all.

Mr. Adams, whose books on contract have sold in the hundreds of thousands in the last five years, is more than a teacher or a propagandist for the game. He is a philosopher as well. The essence of his bridge philosophy is summed up in the phrase:

"From now on contract will be played for fun and not for systems."

In his first article, to be printed tomorrow, he will review the history of bridge from its beginnings in the ancient game of whist, through the stages of just plain bridge and then auction, and finally through the newest refinements and simplification of contract.

Each Sunday in the future he is to have an article devoted to explanations that may be grasped by beginners. Each week day he will have in THE TRIBUNE an interesting bridge problem for more advanced players. These problems will be laid out in a manner which Mr. Adams believes is superior to any yet used in newspaper expositions of bridge, one of his features being a scoring blank for the use of the student.

Mr. Adams' adoption of the new official system as the basis for his teaching comes from his conviction that it is the most nearly perfect yet devised. He recommends it for its simplicity and its logic and for its proved values. It has the recommendation as well of Milton C. Work, Sidney S. Lenz, Madeline Kerwin, and in fact all but one of the men and women who have ever had a large following for their written works.

All of those super-experts collaborated with Mr. Adams in formulating the official system. They gathered in New York in the summer and built their knowledge and thought into a single system, "a system to end systems." It was a necessary procedure. At least seventeen great authors had written books on their individual systems of bidding contract hands and the confusion was so great that the very existence of the game was threatened.

When the experts had tested all the notions and at last agreed on what was right and what was wrong it was found that the official system was not far away from the "straightaway" system that had been outlined and promoted by Mr. Adams in his book "Contract Bridge at Sight," which sold 300,000 copies in little more than a year—a record unequaled in bridge literature.

Strangers may now enjoy their contract when they get together, just as they did after auction, a noble game but less intricate, at last became standardized the world over. Mr. Adams promises to show how the game may be played for the pleasure that's in it.

Teachers have recommended the official system highly. Nearly all the recognized ones are teaching it. Five hundred took their first initiation into its mysteries under the collected experts, including Mr. Adams, in New York. When the school was moved to Chicago by popular demand, it was Mr. Adams who presided at the meeting and took a foremost part in instructing other hundreds from the middle west.

The new bridge editor, aside from his eminence in the bridge field, is recognized as a rising attorney. He is a partner of the legal firm of Adams, Hawley, Brown & Adams. He is the only son of Samuel Adams, who was secretary of the interior under President Taft, and is a descendant of the Adamses of New England who made colonial and revolutionary history. In contrast to most of his associates of the official system he is only 31 years old.

Mr. Adams' first book, "Standardized Contract Bridge," was published in 1927. It was the first clear exposition of a game that had hardly gotten into, much less out of, its swaddling clothes. In 1928 came his "Modern Contract Bridge," which was followed in 1930 by "Contract Bridge at Sight." It was this one that made the sales record. His latest book is "Official Contract at Sight." At present Mr. Adams is co-editor with Milton C. Work of the Bridge magazine.

SOMETHING OUGHT TO BE DONE ABOUT THIS

Even Simplest Case of Acne Deserves Immediate Attention

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

I don't know if in a generation or two hence the facial blemishes known to us will be suffered at all. It won't be because our best medical and lay authorities are not preaching prevention strongly enough.

Take that common affliction generally classified as acne, and which may be anything in lay minds from a mild blackhead condition to an advanced stage of blackhead and pimple formation—we know now that all the mental suffering and agony of sufferers could be prevented. Prevented with attention given early! If treatment is long delayed, it is a hard condition to overcome in the advanced stages.

Parents, you are requested to keep an eagle eye on that young complexion entrusted to your care. I've had opportunity to penetrate into the depths of the feelings of young persons whose parents were ignorant of or indifferent to acne signs in their infancy. It is a most touching and pathetic picture. I don't know anything that so hurts a young girl or man, and hurts them deeply, as the face that suffers acne affliction.

Pimples do not appear instantaneously. A soil favorable for their development is usually previously prepared. First, there is a closing off of the oil glands and those affected present a black dot on the surface.

Now, this is a warning of trouble ahead.

If pimples are treated when only blackheads are present, the course of treatment is short and the result most gratifying. If the condition is neglected, the oily material in the closed off oil glands undergoes decomposition, resulting in an inflammation which leads to pimples.

Then, this irritated and inflamed skin proves an easy victim for pus germs, and eventually the skin may bear a pitted look, a scarred, anyway a disfigured look. Don't leave the mildest acne state even for time to heal. Be scrupulous about face washing; two or three times a day, if necessary. Send for my pamphlet on acne, in which you'll find a formula for a splendid corrective lotion given me by one of our leading skin authorities.

FARM and GARDEN BY PAUL POTTER.

CHOLERA THREATENS HOGS.

Herds of hogs in Iowa and Illinois are showing new hog cholera outbreaks although the disease has not reached the epidemic stage. Widespread "economy measures" on the part of many farmers, who consider the market price of hogs so low that short cuts in the cost of production are necessary and facilitated by taking a chance by not vaccinating, are considered responsible for much of the increase of the disease.

Vaccination of the animals is being pushed in Illinois through the state agricultural association. Serum and virus treatments are being urged for herds whether infected or free from disease. The United States department of agriculture reports that sanitary measures often are effective in keeping hogs free from the cholera but that the only safe practice is a combination of immunization, sanitation, proper feeding and shelter.

In Illinois the last few days 17 counties indicated they are actively engaged in fighting outbreaks. In Ogle county the farm bureau reported demands for serum and virus were particularly numerous in the northwestern part. Swine flu and other ailments accompanied the cholera in its appearance in McLean county.

Outbreaks also were reported from Jersey, Fulton, Menard, Piatt, Coles, Clark, Mason, Pike, Saline, Gallatin, Champaign, Madison, Knox, Whiteside, and Kendall counties. Those in charge are attempting to avoid shortages of the serum and virus as the hogs require several times the amount which would have been necessary for a proper treatment last spring.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

W. L.: THIN HANDS NEED FATTENING CREAMS—cocoa butter, lanolin or almond oil. Knead the lotion deeply with the lotion. My booklet on the hands may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

D. C.: ALMOND MEAL AND OATMEAL may be used for facial baths with pleasing effect. These meal mixtures are softening to the skin and have some bleaching and reducing virtues.

GLADYS L.: WIPE YOUR FACE with witch hazel several times during the day. It is an excellent astringent. Be sure to remove all make-up before going to bed.

COLLEGE PAPER TELLS HOW THE FRESHMEN MAY SEEM SENIORS

Naivete—backed by four years of hard work at it! That's a senior at Barnard college for women.

"Do not hace your picture taken in a Eugenie hat. Think of mother in the soup plates of 1910 and make this a vow.

"Do not gape at every airplane that passes over the campus. If you refuse to notice a dirigible your reputation is made.

"Remember that your language should be inelegant, but not rowdy. This and the above precepts should make you what the college senior is today."

Elizabeth Parker and Leonard Bridges to Wed.

Miss Elizabeth Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Stanley Parker of Winnetka, and Leonard Bridges, son of Dr. and Mrs. Horace J. Bridges of 472 Deming place, are to be married at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the Parker residence. Miss Parker's sister, Miss Jane Parker, is to be her maid of honor and Frank Bridges is to be the best man for his brother. Miss Grace Dewes, Miss Margaret Emily Lynde, Miss Rosemary Sidley, and Miss Lillian Dudley are to be bridesmaids, and the bride's two small nephews, Robert and Warren Crawford, are to be train bearers. The four ushers are Herbert Havemeyer, Daniel Leonard, Rainey Bennett, and Morris von Patten. Mr. Bridges and his bride are going to set up housekeeping at the Marlborough apartments at 400 Deming place.

The earl and countess of Portsmouth are expected in Chicago early next week for a twenty-four hour stopover on their way to England from their ranch in the Big Horn mountains near Sheridan, Wyo. The brief stay will just allow time for hurried visits with their kinsfolk here—Mrs. James A. Field, Mr. and Mrs. John Paul Welling, and the Samuel J. Walkers.

It's Kind to Chastise Wives Occasionally Is Opinion of Doris

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"Regarding your article about women voting kindness as the most desirable quality in man, let me tell you something

"After I proposed and had been accepted, I asked my wife why she had answered yes. She answered, 'Because I thought you'd always be kind to me.' Nothing was said from her side about love.

"For eight years she nagged me. Life was hell and nothing else. I'm paying for it now in handicapped health. For five years after marriage I never said a cross word to her. So long as I loved her I kept hoping. At the end of eight years I told her I would leave her if it weren't for the boy." Since that day I have received kindness with the exception of an occasional outburst at dominating me. When she finds that I no longer tolerate it, I again receive kindness. Why? Because she has a good meal ticket. Women want kindness so they can rule and dominate a man who is kind hearted. Am I not right? W. C. U."

I wouldn't agree that women want kindness so they can dominate the kind hearted one. The fact that they don't usually like the finished dominated product proves something, doesn't it? Women do not like the male they can nag and boss around. No woman does. Least of all the female species given to nagging and bossing. What that one is nagging and bossing for is a creature who will tell her where to get off at. The bully that needs to be confronted with one good dose of courage to bring him to time—that's your nagging woman.

And the kindness she wants is akin to that which reduces the male bully to reason. Maybe not [or better not, I should say] the bloody nose and the blackened eyes used to bring the male bully to time, but it's equivalent in establishing respect.

Kindness isn't indulging. There are times when the greatest kindness is to chastise, discipline, insist upon personal rights. A husband isn't kind to his wife, for instance, who acts the doormat. But you's probably discovered that by now.

WEDDING

New Canaan, Conn., Oct. 16.—(AP)—In an outdoor ceremony, Miss Elizabeth Lawrence Hiss, daughter of Mrs. Phillip Hanson Hiss Jr. of New York, was married late today to John Alfred Sutro, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Sutro of San Francisco. The bridegroom's father is a San Francisco attorney.

—o—

Miss Hiss, daughter of the late Hanson Hiss of New York, is a graduate of Miss Chapin's school and Dana hall, at Wellesley, Mass. The bridegroom graduated from Leland Stanford university in 1926 and from the Harvard law school three years later. He is now associated with his father. The couple will live in San Francisco.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

New York, Oct. 16.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. Everett Colby gave a luncheon yesterday for Senator and Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Henry L. De Rham.

Dr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Stillman will give a dinner dance on Dec. 23 to introduce their daughter, Miss Jane Stillman.

With Few Exceptions, Children Should Eat Without Any Coaxing

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Yesterday we were emphasizing the point that one of the first means toward establishing good eating habits in children is to be human in our attitude toward them—admitting that they are not machines that can always be stoked in exactly the same way. I never did believe in this admonition, "You must clean your plate at every meal."

But we must keep in mind that these are the exceptions. Normally, and barring convalescence, a child should eat without fussing or coaxing, wholesome, well rounded meals day after day. He should eat them within a reasonable time—reasonable for his age. It will take him three or four times as long when he is little and learning to handle a fork and spoon as it will when he is older.

He should eat a fair quantity—not the same as some other child, but a fair quantity for himself. That means, of course, that your observation of his average quantity will be your guide as to what you can expect him to eat. Some children are well nourished on more, some on less than others.

The scene is set then. Given appetizing food in a fair quantity, with a reasonable time allowance, a friendly, easy companionship, little food talk, and an atmosphere of "of course we eat and enjoy our food," with a human allowance for exceptions, a child will eat well. When he doesn't there's a reason—psychological or physical.

Eating difficulties sometimes assume serious aspects—such as vomiting. It astonishes parents frequently to find that even such a worrying and spectacular thing as that may be psychological and cured by such means.

Food Talk.

Although the many root vegetables may be obtained throughout the year, they probably are at their best and cheapest in October. Some of them have been considered rather lowly vegetables, but since the discovery of vitamins and minerals, have come to occupy an important place in our diets.

Cooks should differentiate between the cooking of the green vegetables and the root vegetables. Green vegetables, after having been prepared for cooking, should be put into boiling water, and cooked as rapidly as possible. Root vegetables, when it is possible, have a finer flavor if they are peeled after they have been cooked. In contrast to the former type, too, they are put on the stove in cold water, and cooked covered. They should not boil as rapidly as green vegetables. If they are cooked too quickly you will notice that they tend to disintegrate in the cooking process. This is particularly true of boiled potatoes.

MACAROON BAVARIAN CREAM.

Roll twelve macaroons and soak in one cup of milk. Soak four tablespoons of granulated gelatin in one cup of milk. Make a custard (in a double boiler) of two cups of milk, one and one-fourth cups of sugar, and the yolks of four eggs, slightly beaten. Add the soaked gelatin to the hot custard. Remove from the fire and cool. Whip one pint of cream very stiff; add the macaroons and the custard. Pour in a baking dish and place in the icebox. Serve with whipped cream.

ROAST SHOULDER OF LAMB.

Use three or four pounds of the forequarter of lamb. Have the bone removed from it. Spread a bread stuffing in the meat; roll and tie securely. Squeeze the juice of a lemon over the meat. Dredge with salted flour. Place in a roaster, and sear in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) for fifteen minutes, and then bake slowly for about two hours at 300 degrees Fahrenheit. When half done spread the meat with a tart jelly—this gives it a delicious flavor.

Yield: Ten to twelve servings.

BACON MEAT LOAF.

¾ pound of bacon
½ pound of veal
1 pound of lean beef
2 cups of bread crumbs
1 teaspoon of salt
Pinch of pepper
½ cup of milk
3 eggs
¼ of a green pepper, chopped
8 slices of bacon
1 tablespoon of ground parsley

Grind all the meat together (except the eight strips of bacon). Mix with it the chopped green pepper, parsley, eggs, milk, and bread crumbs. Line a baking dish with strips of bacon. Fill with the meat mixture, and lay strips of bacon across the top. Season. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) for one hour.

Yield: Eight servings.

GRAHAM CRACKER PIE.

18 to 20 graham crackers, crushed
¼ pound of butter, or substitute
¼ teaspoon of salt

Melt the butter, add the cracker crumbs, and combine the two. Line a pie plate with this mixture, and fill with any of your favorite fillings.

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

WOMAN'S OR MISS' UNDIES.

The lines of these panties follow the lines of the figure, while the yoked band that opens at either side does away with any bulk at the waistline. This yoked band and the leg bands provide a chance to use a contrasting color. The fitted brassiere opens at the back. There are many lovely materials that are suitable, such as dimity, crêpe de chine, radium silk, crêpe satin, and triple voile.

The pattern, 2861, comes in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20 years. Size 16 requires ⅞ yard of 39 inch material for the bandeau and bands, with 1¼ yards of 39 inch material for the panties.

Paris Adds Washable Frills to Winter Dress

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Paris is seeing fashion revivals of the frivolities of the Victorian era. Lace petticoats are peeping forth from hems, and waistlines are left to take care of themselves. But couturiers are wise enough to combine them with the practicality of our modern age. Flounces are removable, and lines are cleverly fitted to compensate for the lack of a belt.

Goupy demonstrates how you can be your most feminine and still be practical, in the afternoon dress, sketched today. It is in almond green flat crêpe. The sleeves are the old fashioned angel sleeves, fitted to the elbow, then flaring widely. Two rows of Valenciennes lace border the edges and increase the grace of their flowing lines. The lace is basted on, and can be easily removed for washing.

There is a simple round neck, and from the shoulder to half way between the waist and knees is in one straight piece of the material, following the curves of the body—slightly indented at the waist. A wide circular ruffle is attached where this sheath like piece ends, giving the skirt its graceful fullness. An under slip, edged with two tiers of the Valenciennes lace, hangs just below the skirt hem.

This dress can be worn without the frills, if you feel prompted to use it for business like occasions.

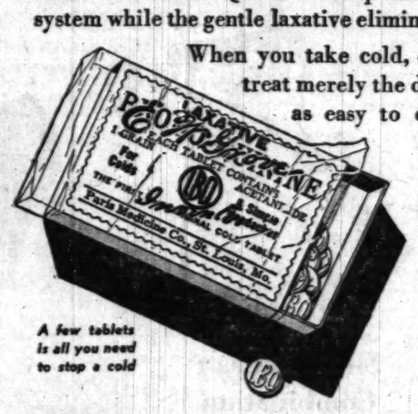
There is one right way to get rid of a cold and its possible complications—take Bromo Quinine. The quinine purifies and fortifies the system while the gentle laxative eliminates the impurities.

When you take cold, doesn't it seem foolish to treat merely the discomforts when it is just as easy to drive the infection completely out of the system?



A few tablets is all you need to stop a cold

YALE GAME TODAY TOPS STAGG'S 40TH YEAR

C. W. MURPHY, CUBS' OWNER IN 1906-1914, DIES

Was Storm Center in Baseball War.

Charles Webb Murphy, owner of the Chicago Cubs in the days of Tinker to Evers to Chance, died at his home, 4800 Sheridan road, yesterday afternoon. He was 62 years old and had been ill since last June, when he suffered an apoplectic stroke.

Murphy purchased the Cubs in 1906 from James A. Hart. He retained the club until differences with the league during the Federal league war forced the withdrawal of organized baseball in 1914. During the eight years he owned the club the Cubs won four National league championships and two world's championships.

Was Sports Writer.

The Cubs were beaten by the White Sox "Hitless Wonders" in the world's series of 1906, defeated Detroit in 1907 and 1908, and lost to the Philadelphia Athletics in 1910. In 1908 the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Cubs out of the National league pennant. At no time during Murphy's régime did the Cubs finish lower than third place.

Murphy was born in Wilmington, O., in 1868. He went to Cincinnati and became a sport writer on the Times-Star, then owned by Charles P. Taft, a brother of former President William Howard Taft.

In 1894 Murphy resigned his position on the Cincinnati Times Star to become publicity director for the New York Giants. While affiliated with the Giants he learned that the Cubs had been offered for sale. Late in the season of 1905 he met Charles Taft in the ball park and expressed a desire to make a bid for the Chicago franchise.

Taft sent Murphy and a confidante to Chicago to appraise the Cubs and later advanced Murphy the $105,000 necessary to make the purchase. The venture was so successful that the latter part of its first year under Murphy the club was operating at a profit. Frank Chance, so-called Peerless Leader, managed the Cubs that year. With the exception of ten per cent of the stock which had been given to Chance Murphy owned the club outright.

Bought Sheckard on Bridge.

He consummated two deals during his first two years which made the Cubs one of the outstanding teams of the decade. One of these was the greatest cut in the history of the game up to that time. Walking across the Brooklyn bridge with Charles Ebbets, owner of the Robins, one evening Murphy suggested a deal for Jimmy Sheckard, considered as the best outfielder of his time.

Ebbets accepted and Murphy sent four players—Maloney and McCarthy, outfielders; Casey, third baseman, and Bridges, pitcher—and cash to Brooklyn. Later Murphy engineered a deal with Cincinnati which brought Harry Steinfeldt, third baseman, and Orval Overall, star right handed pitcher, to the Cubs.

Murphy first drew the wrath of fellow owners and fans when he fell out with Chance and dismissed the Peerless Leader. Shortly after he precipitated the showdown which resulted in his expulsion from organized baseball by banishing Johnny Evers, whom he had made manager, by Hank O'Day, the umpire.

A deal had been arranged with the Braves to send Evers to Boston for Heinie Zimmerman, Pat Duncan, Otto Miller, Jimmy Johnston, Dode Paskert, Perdue and Infielder Sweeney. When Evers heard of the proposed trade, he refused to go to Boston and started dickering with the Federal league. National league owners frowned on Murphy, blaming him for causing the loss of one of the game's greatest stars to the outlaw league.

Taft Buys Stock for $750,000.

A meeting was held in Cincinnati Feb. 21, 1914, at which Gov. John K. Tener of Pennsylvania, president of the National league; Charles Taft, Garry Ackerland of Pittsburgh, who had purchased Chance's stock for $350,000, and John Conway O'Toole of Boston, legal adviser for the league, decided on Murphy's banishment. Taft purchased Murphy's share, which at that time amounted to 53 per cent of the entire stock, for a sum generally reported to have been $750,000.

Murphy, one of the stormy petrels of the game in those days, often remarked he had "run a shoestring into a million." Among his other holdings was the ball park in which the Pittsburgh Pirates played. It has since been named Baker bowl and was owned by Murphy at the time of his death.

Murphy is survived by his widow, Mrs. Louise Murphy, and two brothers, Frank and James Murphy. The body will remain at the residence until Sunday evening, when it will be taken to Wilmington, O., for funeral services and interment.

DETROIT SNAPS MARQUETTE'S STREAK, 7 TO 0

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 16.—(AP)—Marquette university's football team was defeated for the first time in more than two years tonight when the University of Detroit won, 7 to 0, after a battle in the mud.

Rocky Parsaca, Titan quarter back, smashed through right tackle for four yards and a touchdown late in the third period after Detroit twice had gained close range scoring chances. Marquette's only serious threat came in the last few minutes of the game when it had the ball on Detroit's two yard line at the final gun.

Forty Years on the Midway
The Life Story of Amos Alonzo Stagg

A. A. Stagg as he appears in his fortieth year as coach of the University of Chicago football team. The Yale game today will be the highlight of the Old Man's 1931 season. [Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

BY ARCH WARD.

There have been other football coaches besides Stagg who have developed winning elevens. Many, perhaps, have a higher percentage of victories to show for their efforts. There have been other coaching systems that have been successful, although many of them owe their origin to the Old Man of the Midway. But Stagg's ability to command respect and bring others around to his way of doing things makes you feel instinctively that here is a leader in any walk of life.

An interesting incident which reflects generally the feeling that former football players have for Mr. Stagg occurred during the time Jimmy Sheldon was in the University of Chicago law school. Sheldon had played football for four years, serving as captain for two.

How Stagg Emphasizes His Wrath at Practice.

All his life Stagg has been vigorous in opposition to the use of tobacco and liquor. It was in 1905 that Sheldon was standing on 57th street near Lake Park avenue, observing a fire that was destroying an apartment building. He was puffing away at a large stogy. While he was enjoying both the fire and the smoke he saw Mr. Stagg coming upon the scene. He hurriedly took the cigar from his mouth, held it behind his back, and at a favorable moment permitted it to drop into the street, believing that Stagg had not noticed it.

Judge Walter P. Steffen, one of the greatest players Stagg developed, tells an interesting story illustrating how the Maroon leader emphasized his wrath when plays went wrong.

"Whenever he became disgusted with one of his players," said the judge, "he would call him a jackass. After a few years the boys on the squad organized what is known as the 'Jackass club.' Whenever a man was called jackass by Stagg he would be elected to life membership. While we got a great deal of fun out of this, it was not accepted so happily by those who were elected life members. The peculiar thing about it is that Stagg was unaware of the matter until many years after, when I related it to him.

"There were two outstanding incidents with reference to the Jackass club which come to my mind. One evening John Schommer, who was a famous all around athlete, was playing in scrimmage. He had not had much previous football experience. He received a forward pass over the goal line, touched the ball down for a touchdown, and immediately threw the ball into the field of play, thus depriving his team of opportunity to kick goal. It was a rule at that time that the ball, after it had been downed for a touchdown, could not again be touched to the ground until the kicker in trying for a goal after touchdown, kicked the ball. If the ball was accidentally or inadvertently touched to the ground, the side which had scored the touchdown would be deprived of the chance to kick the goal.

"Mr. Stagg immediately shouted, 'You jackass!'

Unique Distinction of Being 2 Jackasses.

"Schommer was automatically elected to life membership in this organization. Many times he has told me how infuriated it made him and that he could barely resist doing violence to Mr. Stagg.

"The other incident about the club concerns Ned Merriam, present track coach at the University of Chicago. He perhaps could be proclaimed Jackass Emeritus as he bears the unique distinction of being the only man who was designated as two jackasses.

"In 1907 we were preparing to play the Carlisle Indians," said Judge Steffen, "in what at that time was a very important game. Mr. Stagg was trying to work out a particular play and it appeared that Merriam was bungling it. Mr. Stagg seemed much perturbed and called Merriam a jackass. We proceeded with practice, but Mer-

Coach A. A. Stagg of the University of Chicago football is proud of the honor that Yale has shown him by coming to Chicago to play the Maroons, but if his alma mater expects that to make any difference on the gridiron this afternoon Yale is due for a rude shock.

"I am deeply gratified that Yale has come here," was Coach Stagg's characteristic remark yesterday. "But I have always been guided by duty rather than emotion. My duty, and the duty of my team, is to beat Yale."

It will be Wildcats vs. Bruins at Dyche stadium today when Northwestern's football team meets the eleven from the University of California at Los Angeles. A crowd of 30,000 will see the intersectional game.

Another Northwestern-Notre Dame conflict will enliven matters for the early arrivals when the B teams of the two schools meet in the first of a series of two games. The preliminary game will start at 12:30 o'clock.

Spaulding, 31 Bruins Arrive.

Coach Bill Spaulding and his squad of 31 players arrived in Chicago yesterday morning after three days and two nights of riding. The west coast eleven completed the 2,200 mile jaunt in splendid shape and after a brisk workout at Dyche stadium yesterday afternoon Coach Spaulding announced that every man on the squad was ready for action. Accompanying the Bruins on their trip east was S. W. Cunningham, graduate manager, and Horace Gillette and Robert Evans, two west coast officials, who will assist in officiating today's game.

In their workout yesterday the orange jersied Californians appeared to be a husky lot and judging from the spirit displayed by every member of the squad, they are intent on giving their Big Ten adversaries a busy afternoon. Yesterday's brisk October weather proved to the liking of the visitors.

U. C. L. A.'s starting lineup today will match Northwestern's as far as weight is concerned. The Bruins' line is a husky one, containing several men who weigh 200 pounds. The backfield will concede several pounds' advantage to the quartet of Wildcat backs.

Duncan Star Back.

California's biggest ace is Capt. Norm Duncan, one of the leading full backs in the Pacific Coast conference. He is one of three seniors in the Bruins' starting lineup, the others being McMillan, tackle, and Wellendorf, end. Duncan is a player of the triple threat variety, doing practically all of California's kicking and passing as well as plunging. Coach Dick Hanley will start his regulars against the visitors in order to get a last look at the team which next Saturday will open its Big Ten campaign against Ohio State at Columbus. The Purple will still be without the services of Reb Russell, their hard hitting full back, who has been unable to rejoin the team since the Nebraska game two weeks ago.

Oliver Olson, sophomore full back from Wheaton, Ill., who stepped into Russell's job in the Notre Dame game, again will perform in the Wildcat backfield.

Three other first year men will be in the Purple lineup. They are George Potter, quarter back; Ken Meenan, half back, and Ed Manske, end. These three conducted themselves much to Coach Hanley's liking in the Notre Dame game and as a result have been rewarded with positions among the regulars.

N. U. to Test Reserves.

Hanley is also desirous of seeing a number of his reserves in action today and if opportunity warrants he will insert these youngsters into the game. A back field consisting of Will Lewis, quarter back; Al Moore, full back, and Sid Burnstein and Jakie Sullivan, half back, is slated for considerable action.

PURDUE WORRIED, BADGERS GLOOMY IN TODAY'S GAME

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 16.—There's nothing like complete coverage on these crucial football games—and who is there who will say that tomorrow's clash between Wisconsin and Purdue is not crucial? So our experting today will be in two installments.

The first installment is set down in Madison, after which we will leap, like a gazelle, down to Janesville, Wis., which is 40 miles away, where Coach Noble Kizer has 34 of his Boilermakers quartered, safe from sin and sleeplessness.

Coach Is Not Too Gloomy.

Our Madison bulletin: Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite, far famed for his more or less rippling mirth and happy mien, wasn't bubbling over with gloom any more than usual as he closed his practice for the Boilermakers. In fact, he expressed himself as being well satisfied with the week's practice. There was pessimism aplenty in Madison, however, though the depression was by no means hopeless about the town.

Mike Egan, red hot sport of the Wisconsin capital and an intensive student of football, has given some heart to the betting gentry by predicting that the outcome will be one of the big upsets of the current season—this prediction being based on the expectation that the Badgers will slip over a victory. When he gets down to the mathematics of wagering, however, Mr. Egan allows that 10 to 7 would be about the right odds for a Wisconsin partisan to demand.

Games Always Close.

Unlike the situation in most football betting, there is little wagering on the score. Purdue-Wisconsin contests in the last six years haven't offered much encouragement to the score sharks. In only one year were the teams as far apart as two touchdowns—in 1929, when Purdue won, 13 to 0.

The Wisconsin folk are in a state of conflicting emotions in regard to the weather. They are pulling for nice weather, for obvious reasons, but at the same time they know that a dry field will favor Purdue and its alleged devastating forward pass attack. It is probable that the boys in the counting room are unanimous for a nice day, for tomorrow's game is one of two major contests in Madison this season and it would be comforting to the wallet if about 40,000 were to step out to Camp Randall tomorrow.

Fair Weather Is Promised.

The prediction, since we have been talking so much about the weather these last three days, is for sunny

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 16.—For the twenty-eighth time since 1897 Ohio State university and the University of Michigan will meet tomorrow. Seventy thousand—near capacity of Ferry field—will watch the renewal of a football rivalry which is the oldest continuous athletic relationship for both universities.

Each fall, except for 1898 and 1899 and a lapse of five years between 1912 and 1918, Ohio State and Michigan have battled for supremacy. Michigan has won 20 times and Ohio State five times, including the days a decade ago when Chick Harley and Pete Stinchcomb first turned back the Wolverines. On two occasions the teams have battled in deadlock, a scoreless tie in 1900 and three points each in 1910.

Michigan Conceded an Edge.

Tomorrow's conflict is all important to the championship ambitions of both universities. Michigan, sharing the 1930 title with Northwestern, must win if it again will reign supreme. It is Ohio State's inaugural conference game.

Michigan, whose veteran team last fall won from Ohio State, 13 to 0, is conceded the advantage. Nine veterans, guarding the line from end to end and holding forth at quarter back and full back in the ball carrying positions, should not be stampeded by Ohio. Michigan has lost Simrall and Wheeler, whose speed and blocking were invaluable, but it has to offer a sophomore pair of backs, Jack Heston and Stanley Fay, whose ability has been proved.

Ohio State also returns a veteran squad to the Michigan wars. These men conquered five opponents in 1930, including two intersectional foes, Pittsburgh and Navy. They lost to Northwestern and Michigan and were tied by Wisconsin.

Even in Weight.

Men of Yale, 500 and more of them, gathered at the Stevens hotel last night for the alumni dinner before the game against Chicago today. Director A. A. Stagg, Yale '88, was guest of honor. Yale and Chicago—interwoven so deftly and yet so definitely they hardly could be separated—was the basic thought of all speakers.

President John R. Winterbotham, newly elected head of the Yale club of Chicago, advanced the thought in his remarks introducing Toastmaster William Lyons Phelps of the Yale English department. Prof. Phelps, or "Billy" Phelps as he is known to Yale men, expressed it more concretely when he said, "Chicago is a Yale institution. That is why it has such a glorious past and why we men of Yale think it has such a glorious future. And in this great institution, the greatest professor of manhood is a Yale alumnus, Stagg."

"Sad if Chicago Wins."

Director Stagg echoed the sentiment when he ended a talk in which he told what Yale had done for him, a poor boy who never had expected to be able to attend college, with the peroration: "I may hope Chicago will win tomorrow. If Yale wins we will extend our heartiest congratulations. If, by any chance, Chicago wins there will be a certain feeling of sadness on my part."

President Hutchins of the University of Chicago gave a talk in which sly humor and epigrams predominated. It registered in its references with the sons of Eli present. In his talk the 31 year old president assumed to have been present at the founding of the university and to have helped determine its policies, even to have known Yale in the days of Stagg. As an example, he said: "In those days Stagg actually looked like the pictures THE TRIBUNE is now printing of him."

And as a finale, this: "This mutual influence of the great institution o the Atlantic seaboard and the greatest institution west of it must have a favorable effect upon both. Whichever way victory may go tomorrow we can feel that it will go to a university that has those objectives, those practices and those ideals that we here tonight learned to cherish beneath the Elms."

At Speakers' Table.

George E. Vincent, Yale alumnus, once of the Chicago faculty, later president of the University of Minnesota, and still later of the Rockefeller Foundation, was the final speaker. In one of those addresses for which Dr.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

Yale's Bulldogs and Chicago's Maroons will play at Stagg field this afternoon before an expected crowd of 40,000. The game will start at 2 p. m. These elevens, representing the Blue and the Maroon, will exhibit the only spirit of combat. Otherwise it will be a lovefest.

Yale, once symbolic of all there was in football except that shown at Harvard and Princeton, comes to Chicago—comes west of the Allegheny mountains—on a gridiron tour for the first time in its history. It comes because Yale wishes to honor an alumnus, Amos Alonzo Stagg, who pitched Yale to five baseball championships and played on its football teams. Stagg is coaching his fortieth year at the University of Chicago.

Schools Closely Linked.

This is the Yale whose president, James R. Angell, was once of the Chicago faculty; the Yale which furnished Chicago with its first president, William Rainey Harper; the Yale which furnished the present president, Robert Maynard Hutchins, and the Yale which furnished Stagg, who has stood for all there was in athletics on the Midway for forty years.

If any Yale man could forget his loyalty he would wish Chicago to win this game. If any Chicago man could forget his loyalty he would wish Yale to win. So these alumni and partisans will gather in a friendly spirit of rivalry in which the reunion, the establishment of sports relations, is really secondary to the game itself.

It must be difficult for Director Stagg, who has listened to Yale cheers of encouragement, to its "Boola Boola," and who has participated in Yale traditions and customs, to be planning to bring the downfall of the Blue with a football eleven of which his son is a member. It is not hard for any other members of the respective coaching staffs. To them the game is not so much a reunion as a contest.

Friedman, Walsh Drill Yale.

Benny Friedman, once of Michigan and winner of THE TRIBUNE trophy for the Big Ten player of greatest value to his team, has drilled the Eli backs in the very things which he thinks will overcome Chicago. Adam Walsh, pupil of Knute Rockne, has told those Yale forwards how to charge into the supposedly weak Maroon line. Head Coach Mal Stevens has no Chicago complex.

Then there are Pat Page, Nels Norgren, and other Chicago assistant coaches, developed under the Old Man, who have only Maroon training and traditions to uphold. They regard the Maroons as an eleven which has been underestimated in its fighting, if not in its physical qualities, and which showed its true caliber against Michigan last Saturday.

So, while Yale and Chicago elevens, out there on the gridiron, are battling for a victory in which sentiment more than rivalry plays an important part, their partisans will be watching the affair with hopes for victory, but really caring more for the sentiment, the occasion which has made this meeting possible. It will be perhaps

DOUBLE HEART IS VICTOR IN SLOW MOTION FINISH

Mud Forces Hawthorne Runners to a Walk.

It was a tired bunch of horses that munched oats in the barns at old Hawthorne last night and those which ran and were still able to munch, deserved every oat fed them.

The Stickney course was at its worst from a racing standpoint yesterday. It was drying out from a muddy condition and the resultant goo and gumbo held tighter than a Pullman window. As a result times that would make even a slow freight blush were hung out and as the various fields came floundering down to the wire they looked like actors in a slow motion picture comedy.

Double Heart Wins Feature.

Double Heart proved that he could pick 'em up after he laid 'em down better than any of the other four $4,000 platers that met in the fifth and feature race, but was just about the most tired race horse Hawthorne has ever seen as he wabbled back to the winner's circle.

The F. A. Carreaud 5 year old won by a length from Bill Orange, with Fervor third. Had all three of them been asked to go another 20 jumps they probably would have chucked it and laid right down on the track. That's how tough it was to negotiate in the holding clay. The winner's time, 1:26 4-5, was 5 2-5 seconds slower than the track mark for the six and a half furlongs.

It was that last sixteenth that tuckered out most of the fields and the various winners were slowed down almost to a walk as they crossed the wire. The crowd actually laughed during the second race when Diodoro and High Pockets came down from the eighth pole nose and nose, with Diodoro getting up in the last step to win by a nod.

Cousin Judy Canters Home.

Cousin Judy gave the crowd no inkling of how tough the track was, when she won the opening dash from a head of fair 2 year olds. Cousin Judy came home in a canter by a comfortable margin, but it developed later after watching the other fields struggle around the oval that a canter was the best any of them could do.

Theorist Jane was the best plodder in the third race, but she had to come from behind to score. It wasn't so much that Jape turned on the power at the finish as it was that Tommy Tickle all but expired when almost home that won for the former.

BY FRENCH LANE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 16.—The Bulldogs from Drake are coming to town tomorrow to battle an angry Notre Dame football team—a team that is just beginning to get mad because of the scoreless tie with Northwestern a week ago.

And the more thought one gives to the skirmish between the Irish and the Bulldogs, which will take place before a crowd of 25,000, including some 15,000 Boy Scouts, Campfire Girls and Four-H members from all parts of Indiana, the more one admires the courage of the Bulldogs from Drake.

The Bulldogs have ripped and roared in all their fury into the Irish five times within the last five years. And what did they get? Not even a nibble at the seat of a Notre Dame man's pants.

Some Day Perhaps—

Drake has made three touchdowns against Notre Dame in five years. The score for the five years is Notre Dame, 20; Drake, 20. But some of these days it may be tomorrow, for who can tell—the Bulldogs will clamp their stout jaws down on the wild gridiron men from Notre Dame and then will be a different story to tell.

The whole football world will be excited if that story is written tomorrow night. But there doesn't seem to be one chance in one hundred that it will be unfolded.

For four teams of rip snorting Notre Dame warriors raced up and down the practice field this afternoon just as teams once romped over the same practice field to reach a peak in Rockne. The little gallery on the sidelines couldn't help feeling sorry for what's going to happen to the scrawling Bulldogs.

The battle with the Bulldogs isn't a big spot on Notre Dame's football agenda; more likely it is just a breathing spell between the fights the Irish scheduled with Northwestern and Pittsburgh. At any rate you can't convince anybody at Notre Dame or in all Indiana that the Bulldogs are going to do any clawing or biting at the legs, the hips, or the chests of the Irish, in this clash.

Worried by Weather.

With the Bulldogs quartered in Chicago, it was strictly a Notre Dame gathering here tonight. And the only thing to cause any annoyance was the whims of the weather man. "Fair tonight and Saturday," he predicted. But just the same, rain was falling when the four Notre Dame teams wound up their practice as darkness settled over the field. And clouds were hanging low.

Even Coach Hunk Anderson was out of sorts with the weather man. "With a clear day and fast footing we can find out what our team is going to amount to," he remarked. "But if it is raining and muddy we won't know much more about it than we did after the Northwestern game last Saturday."

The changes Coach Anderson made in his regular lineup earlier in the week are to be effective in the game against Drake. Krause is to be at left tackle in place of Culver. Greeney will be at left guard in place of Harris. Devore takes Mahoney's assignment at end and Melinkovich will be at full back in place of Banas.

May Use 45 Men.

But the Notre Dame coach confessed that he expects to use about 45 players in tomorrow's battle so it isn't likely any one will know who is a regular or a reserve at the end of the struggle.

Bradley Tech Tests Remade Illinois Today

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—With Cil Berry shifted to quarter back, Illinois' reorganized eleven will get its first test here tomorrow afternoon against Bradley Tech of Peoria. This is the last contest before the Illini inaugurate their home conference schedule against Michigan next Saturday.

Herman Walser, who started at quarter back against Purdue, will replace Berry at half back, Ed Snavely, one of the seven sophomores on the first eleven, will play full back.

Vernon Perkins, who never played football until last fall, gains a guard position through the shakeup. He will be playing against a team from his home town, for he lives but six miles from Peoria and attended high school there. Other changes in the line place Robert Marriner at end, Ray Nussbaum at guard, Monroe Glick at tackle, and Bob May, center.

It is hoped that the remoulded team will show more strength against Michigan than against Purdue, but Bradley profits in meeting an Illini team that has not yet had opportunity to work much together.

PRINCE SAUNDERS FLOORS SHEA IN 8TH; WINS BOUT

Saunders knocked Shea down in the ninth with a right uppercut, but Eddie was up immediately for no count. Saunders jarred Shea with three successive rights in the eighth and had him in a bad way at the bell in the tenth.

Bruno Betzel Is Named 1932 Louisville Manager

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 16.—(AP)—Bruno Betzel, second baseman and former manager of the Indianapolis American association club, was appointed today as manager of the Louisville Colonels. Betzel played with Louisville from 1919 to 1927, when he was traded to Indianapolis. He replaces Allan Sothoron, who went to the St. Louis Browns as a coach.

Chicago Latin Eleven Battles Harvard Today

The Chicago Latin school football team will play its second game of the season this afternoon, meeting Harvard on the former's field. Other games on the Chicago Latin schedule are: the first time when that trite phrase, "May the best team win," has been said sincerely.

Oct. 23—Harris at Latin; Oct. '31—Latin at Milwaukee Country Day; Nov. 7—North Shore Country Day at Latin; Nov. 14—St. Louis at Latin.

Stagg's Yale Faces Stagg's Chicago Today

Unlimber After Arrival.

Yale's gridiron hosts, led by Coach Stevens, 45 strong, arrived on their special train at the Englewood station yesterday afternoon. They were met by representatives of the Yale Club of Chicago and escorted to their quarters at the Hotel Windermere East, whence they emerged shortly in football togs for a limbering up practice on the gridiron where they will play today.

These football sons of Eli loomed large in bulk so far as the eye could determine. Cold statistics showed them nine pounds to the man heavier in the line. In the back field, where the half pints, Capt. Albie Booth of Yale and Paul Stagg, son of the Old Man, hold forth, both of them under 150 pounds, avoirdupois was about even.

Because of a nonscouting agreement, neither Yale nor Chicago supposedly knows its opponent's offense. Stagg relies on his flanker and forward passing attack which scored a touchdown against Michigan. Yale, with a composite repertoire of the teachings of Warner, Yost, and Hawley, not to mention Mal Stevens, has one man fading off tackle with Albie or "Able" Booth in the carrying role. Otherwise the opposing offense is "X," the unknown quantity, to the two rivals.

Present Blanket to Stagg.

Between halves, members of the "C" club will gather to present a white blanket with forty stars, each star denoting a year of service, to Director Stagg. Yale's band of 54 pieces will collaborate with the Maroon tooters in the preliminary and between halves ceremonies.

Yale's celebration of the occasion began last night with an alumni dinner at the Stevens hotel.

The festivities will conclude tonight with a special Yale night at the Garrick theater, where principals in the shows will interpolate Blue "local color," assisted by the Yale band, which will be present.

For those interested in the game rather than the sentiment, let us record that two changes in the Yale lineup were indicated in the advance notices yesterday. Nichols is slated to start at left guard instead of Saner. Taylor probably will have the right half starting assignment rather than Todd.

The Maroon line will be made up of the forwards who played the entire game against Michigan last week. The back field is a problem. Vic Sahlin and Pete Zimmer are certain to start, but Coach Stagg indicated that he may use Birney and Summers instead of his son and Bob Wallace because both of the former are flankers. Both are strong defensively. Paul, however, is certain to see action.

Joe Temple, who has had to learn the plays this week after his early season ineligibility, probably will be inserted when there is an emergency which calls for strength in backing up the line. Wallace, leading ground gainer last week, probably will get into the game early.

Sahlin will do most of the kicking for the Maroons, and the passing will be divided by Zimmer, Stagg, Wallace, and, if he gets into the game, Gene Buzzell.

Forty Years on the Midway

riam seemed unable to grasp what Mr. Stagg wished him to do. After he had spotted the play three or four times more, Mr. Stagg, in exasperation shouted: 'Merriam, you are two jackasses!'"

Points Out Error to Officials of Game.

"We were playing Northwestern in 1909," Page recalled, "in one of the hardest games of the season. The going had been pretty tough for us, a couple of goalward thrusts having been stopped by penalties. Finally we got what appeared to be a break. We recovered a loose ball near the goal line for a touchdown. At any rate the officials called it a touchdown and we kicked the point following. We were greatly enthused as were thousands of Maroon supporters. Just as we lined up ready to resume play out strode the Old Man. He called the officials into a huddle and spoke to them like this:

"'Gentlemen, I happen to be on the rules committee and I believe you have erred in giving us that touchdown. Chicago is not entitled to that score as the impetus did not come from our team.'

"So Northwestern was given a touchback and our score was erased. As captain of the team I didn't like to have decisions reversed, as we all felt good and bad decisions were a part of the game. But here was a coach who felt justified in reversing the order for the good of the game and the rules of play."

Only Letter Winner Can Sing "C" Song.

Mr. Stagg was the first coach to organize varsity letter men. "The order of the C," made up of famous athletes from 1892 to 1931, come back from all parts of the country once a year to the club's annual banquet. Every spring the new letter winners meet in the trophy room of Bartlett gymnasium where Mr. Stagg hears each athlete sing "The Song of the C."

Only letter winners, according to custom, can sing this song in public. The renditions usually are pretty bad, but Stagg hears them all through, beating time vigorously and pausing only in modesty at the lines, "To the Grand Old Man and his splendid dream." Following are the words of the song:

When sight and sound of the campus
Fade in the long busy years,
Yet will return in the memory
Echoes of old songs and cheers;
You of the track, field and diamond,
Fighters for clean victory,
You who have loved all fair, square sport,
You'll hear the Song of the C.:
"Go, Chicago! Go, Chicago!"
Hear the battle cry!
"Go, Chicago! Go, Chicago!"
Yours until you die.
She will remember,
You'll not forget her,
Though you afar may be,
Hear her calling,
Calling to you ever;
Honor the broad, white C.
Here's to the broad, white C!
To an honored flag,
To a loyal team,
To Old Man Stagg
And his splendid dream,
To the days so rare,
That are gone too soon,
To the game played fair;
'Neath the old maroon!

And so we near the end of our story. Only one thing more:

When will Mr. Stagg retire? He answers the question himself:

"When I feel that somebody else can do a better job. Whatever value I have to the young men at the University of Chicago is in my contacts on the football field. I would lose that close association were I to resign myself to the less strenuous duties of athletic director."

For the good of the University of Chicago and the inspiration he provides to the young men of the nation, I hope Mr. Stagg carries on for many more years.

It is the privilege of few men to change the nature of things in any sphere, to blaze pioneering paths through established routines.

Mr. Stagg belongs to that small group.

[The End.]

TRAMBLIE WINS BY KNOCKOUT OVER MATTHEWS

Roy Tramblie of Rockford knocked out Matty Matthews in the first round of a scheduled ten round windup at the Cicero stadium last night before a crowd of 1,200. A right and left to the jaw sent Matthews out of the ring and he was counted out.

Johnny Baima, former Golden Glove winner, easily disposed of Sid Speck in the eight round semi-windup. Speck was on the verge of being knocked out several times. Another Golden Glove champion, Paul Darzo, was declared a winner over Kid Irish when Kid Irish claimed a foul and refused to continue. Clarence Davis and Herb Peterson fought a six round draw.

Blue Badgers Play Worried Purdue Today

Coach Thistlethwaite was undecided today on several positions. Moose Kruger may be back in the regular lineup at center after having spent most of the week with the second stringers; Doug Simmons, 60 pounds lighter but more active, will be at center if Kruger does not start.

John Schneller is certain to start at full back and "Buckets" Goldenberg is a fixture at quarter back, but the half back positions are in doubt. If Russ Rebholz, three year veteran, does not start at left half back, his place will be taken by Joe Linfor, Des Moines, Ia., boy who ran a kickoff back 95 yards for a touchdown a week ago.

Either Bobby Schiller or Walter McGuire will be at right half back and whichever one is in the game will act as field general. Schiller is a rugged sophomore and McGuire is a junior from Hawaii who was injured early in the season.

And Now for Purdue.

"I couldn't sleep until 6 o'clock this morning," Mr. Kizer said. "All I could do was toss and toss and toss as I tried to lure Morpheus. Whenever the sandman seemed in the offing, the ogre of Wisconsin's powerful line would stab me and again I would be wide awake.

"The Badgers are much stronger than they have shown in their nonconference games and we have not been deceived in the least by their mild showing to date.

"My team is in good shape, with the possible exception of Horstmann, and Yunevich is ready to play the entire game if necessary. Risk has recovered from the illness which kept him out of most of the Illinois game and he will start, although I expect to give Hecker an assignment before the game is over."

Vincent is noted, alternating humor and seriousness, he reached heights which were a fitting ending for an evening of Yale and Chicago sentiment.

Seated at the speakers' table were Henry A. Gardner of the Yale alumni advisory council, who with Fred McNally has promoted the Yale activities in connection with the game; Prof. George Nettleton of New Haven, Mathew Mills, past president of the Yale Club of Chicago; President Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago, Prof. William Lyon Phelps, toastmaster; President John R. Winterbotham of the Yale Club of Chicago; Prof. A. Alonzo Stagg, Dr. George E. Vincent, John V. Farwell, Frank F. [Pudge] Heffelfinger of Minneapolis, who played guard when Stagg was a Yale end, Hopewell Rogers, Yale alumni advisory council.

In a prominent position near the speakers' table were seated these graduates of many decades ago, three of them of the class of 1874: Henry D. Robbins, '74; William Kelly of Iron Mountain, Mich., '74; William O. Henderson of Columbus, O., '74; Irwin Rew, '89; Clifford W. Barnes, '89; Thomas E. STEFFEN STAR AS DE PAUL DEFEATS ST. MARY'S, 20-6

De Paul university ended the string of victories of St. Mary's of Winona, Minn., on Chicago gridirons by scoring a 20 to 6 triumph in the eleventh game of their series last night at Mills stadium. Five thousand watched the Blue Demons hand the visitor their first defeat of the season.

Matty Steffen, star of De Paul's first two victories of the season, scored twice in the second period. Steffen drove through St. Mary's line five yards for De Paul's first touchdown and later raced around left end for nine yards to give the Blue Demons a 14 to 0 lead.

De Paul Blocks Punt.

A blocked punt paved the way for De Paul's first touchdown. McGivern kicked to St. Mary's ten yard line. The ball was recovered by Basquette, De Paul right guard, and on the next play Steffen gained a yard. Then on an off tackle play he took the ball over.

On the kickoff Doody took the ball to St. Mary's 40 yard line and on two plays, Steffen carried it 26 yards. St. Mary's line held, and on the attempt to punt the kick was blocked by Cherne. Coan, De Paul end, recovered on St. Mary's five yard line.

St. Mary's Pass Scores.

McGivern's plunge through center gained a yard and Steffen, hitting the line through guard, scored his second touchdown. His kick for the extra point again was good.

St. Mary's only touchdown was made late in the second period when it completed two first downs and reached the De Paul 25 yard line. Capt. Bob Huennekins then hurled a pass to Pan Chartz in the end zone.

St. Mary's, with the ball on its own 26 yard line, was penalized 25 yards in the third period. McGivern then plunged through center for the Blue Demons' last touchdown of the game.

FOREIGN TRADE OF UNCLE SAM SHOWS UPTURN

Seasonal September Rise Is Reported.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 16.—A seasonal improvement in the foreign trade of the United States in September brought the value of exports and imports of the country in that month to 352 million dollars, an increase of $21,500,000 above the August total and resulted in a favorable balance of trade of about $10,000,000, according to figures made public today by the department of commerce.

A greater curtailment of exports than of imports during August resulted in an unfavorable trade balance amounting to $2,000,000.

Total Is Below Year Ago.

Merchandise exports during September were valued by the department at 181 million dollars, an increase of approximately $16,000,000 over the August level of $164,817,000. Despite the increase, however, the total for the month was 131 million dollars less than that of September, 1930, and marked the lowest value of shipments for any month, with the exception of last July and August, since September, 1914.

Viewing the department's export statistics covering the last several years, Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, remarked that the September increase was "merely seasonal," and could not be regarded as indicating any definite improvement.

An increase also was shown in the month's imports from abroad which were valued at 171 million dollars, compared with 166 million dollars for August. In the same month in 1930, imports from foreign countries were valued at $226,352,000ñ and the total for September, 1931, was the smallest for any month since September, 1921.

Record Gold Movement.

A record 1931 gold movement to and from the United States was shown in the September summary. Exports of the metal reached a total for the month of $28,708,000, compared with the previous high for the year of one million for July. In the same month last year, shipments of gold from the United States had a value of $11,133.

The country continued to increase its gold supply during the month, however, due to imports amounting to $48,240,000, which brought a net gain of $20,532,000. In the same month last year the country gained gold to the extent of $2,547,000.

The excess of silver imports over exports during September amounted to $248,000, compared with an excess of exports amounting to $442,000 in the same month last year.

COTTON CLOSES STRONG

Cotton markets made a strong finish yesterday with prices around the top and gains of 9@10 points on futures in Chicago and New Orleans and 8@10 in New York. Spot market was firm, with New York up 5 points to 8.35c, New Orleans up 10 points to 8c, Galveston 8.95c, and Houston 6c. Liverpool closed unchanged to 3 points net lower with spot sales 7,000 bales. Hedging sales were large and were well absorbed. Spot houses have been good buyers of December for two days. The holding movement is restricting hedge sales somewhat. Although the movement in the south has increased, but is rather below the average. Trade sentiment is more mixed with investment buying taking futures on breaks. Port stocks are decreasing and specialists say May will likely to exceed all previous records. Reports to Europe continue small, but to the continent are heavy.

Spinners' takings of American cotton for the week were 375,000 bales, compared with 287,000 bales the previous week and 315,000 bales last year. Into sight movement for the week was 972,000 bales against 972,000 the previous week and 728,000 bales last year. Prices follow:

RESERVE BANK HERE INCREASES DISCOUNT RATE

Firmer Money Ahead for Middle West.

BY O. A. MATHER.

The movement toward firmer money rates spread throughout the east and middle west yesterday. In Chicago the federal reserve bank advanced its rediscount rate from 2½ to 3½ per cent, thereby conforming to similar action by the New York reserve bank on Thursday. The Boston reserve bank also raised its rate from 2½ to 3½ per cent.

The large Chicago banks immediately followed the increase in the reserve bank's rediscount rate by raising the interest rates they will pay on commercial deposits. They will hereafter pay 1 per cent on demand deposits of sufficient size, compared with one-half of 1 per cent previously paid, and they will pay 1½ per cent on time deposits, compared with the former rate of 1 per cent.

May Release Funds.

While the higher reserve bank rate means that member banks will have to pay more on their borrowings, the fact that the banks are offering higher rates to depositors is expected to have some effect in bringing out money that has been hoarded. It is held that lending rates also will be advanced upward somewhat, but this is not expected to have any adverse effect on business, as the recent abnormally low money rates failed to stimulate trade and industry.

The higher federal reserve rediscount rates were felt in other ways yesterday. In New York call money loaned at 2½ per cent for the first time in nearly a year and commercial paper rose to 3½ per cent. But these rates, like the reserve rates, are still abnormally low.

Viewpoint of Bankers.

Bankers in Chicago and New York yesterday expressed the view that the return of money rates to a more normal basis will prove constructive. They said that much of the foreign owned gold now withdrawn, they believe that money rates will hereafter be governed more by our own credit situation. It was pointed out that foreign gold has not been used as the basis for expansion of currency and therefore its withdrawal should not occasion any particular disturbance.

Bankers again emphasized that if the great mass of currency, estimated at nearly a billion dollars, now being hoarded by Americans is returned to the banks the credit and currency position of the United States will be stronger than ever. While gold exports were about $44,000,000 yesterday, there was a decrease of $7,732,000 in gold earmarked for foreign account and gold imports were $8,412,000, which brought the net loss down to slightly more than $28,000,000.

WEATHER AIDS TRADE

Notwithstanding the continued uncertainment in international financial affairs, leading trade publications found a more optimistic note in reviewing the industrial and trade aspects of the last week. More seasonable weather has resulted in a definite stimulation of delayed buying and a more confident feeling is displayed in trade circles despite the conservative attitude exhibited in all branches of industry.

"A fair amount of optimism is to be found this week in the trade reports from 44 leading cities," Bradstreet's reports. "This is due mostly to the arrival of cooler weather which has definitely stimulated buying in certain lines. But it also seems due, in less degree, to an apparent increased amount of confidence in the general situation. There can be little doubt that business is gradually adjusting itself to changed conditions and becoming less depressed by the conservative attitude everywhere displayed."

Fool Aids Confidence.

"The formation of the new banking pool seems also to have strengthened confidence.

"Retailers have been encouraged by stronger demand for the heavier lines of clothing and other cool weather articles. In some cases wholesalers and manufacturers also felt the good effects of this brisker buying, as is to be expected with the hand to mouth buying so prevalent."

"Many reports mention the heavy advertising which some retailers are doing. This is helping to sustain volume."

An Encouraging Report.

The most encouraging report on trade conditions published for some time is included in Dun's review, which says:

"The improvement in sentiment and the slackening of the tension in the financial situation has given both wholesale and retail demand an impetus.

"A definite turn for the better this week was helped by the drop in temperatures. Where weather conditions have been favorable, October trade is running ahead of the September record, and is also in excess of last year, being aided in many instances by anniversary and special fall sales.

"The gains have been largest in clothing and dry goods lines and in the heating and electrical refrigerator trade."

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 16.—(AP)—Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock exchange, tonight defended short selling as a source of great stability in a time of crisis, as a necessity if the exchange is to keep open, and as a thoroughly legal practice.

Had there been no short interest in the market on Sept. 21, the day after England's suspension of the gold standard, Whitney said, the stock exchange might have been forced to close for the third time in its history.

He denied, in his address before the Hartford Chamber of Commerce, which was broadcast over a nation-wide radio hookup, that short selling had caused a decline in security prices. Instead, he said, the decline was due to "our unsatisfactory business conditions and to the liquidation of securities owned outright or held on margin."

Predicts Better Days.

"It also is wrong to say that a ban on short selling could halt our business depression," he said. "When economic equilibrium in the world's affairs is again reëstablished—and make no mistake, gentlemen, it will be—liquidation of securities will stop, buyers will regain confidence, and prices will rise.

"The prohibition of short selling would delay and cannot hasten this process. Neither our governmental authorities by means of legislation, nor the New York Stock exchange by means of its regulations can by any magic perform economic miracles."

Mr. Whitney disclosed for the first time that last month's ban on short selling was not complete, since it became necessary after the first two hours to permit a limited amount of short selling to prevent corners and unwarranted and dangerous advances.

Explains Temporary Check.

The exchange governors were confronted with three alternatives Sept. 21, Whitney said. They could have closed the exchange, but this would not have held up prices and would have frozen bank loans and investments.

Secondly, they could have established minimum prices, a measure tried successfully in 1914, but considered useless in the recent emergency, since unspent liquidation might have forced prices under minimum quotations "and in effect result in a closing of the whole market under fire." The third expedient, and the one adopted, was temporarily suspending short selling.

When the exchange governing committee decided to open for business on the morning of Sept. 21 the short interest, according to the compilation at the close of the previous week, was 4,241,000 shares. It was assumed by the board that a restriction on short sales would force heavy covering, thus steadying the market until the immediate shock of the London news had passed.

Confirms Decision.

"The result completely confirmed the decision of the governing committee," Whitney said. "Share prices rallied during Monday, Sept. 21, and Tuesday, Sept. 22, the volume of trading expanded and all who had securities and wished to sell them had ample opportunity to do so. Time was also afforded the great security markets of Europe, and especially the London Stock exchange, to adopt suitable emergency measures and to reopen."

The short interest was substantially reduced Sept. 21, 22, and 23, although on the last day restrictions had been removed. From Sept. 24 to Oct. 5 the market had enormous losses, but short selling. President Whitney asserted, did not cause this decline. At the close of business Oct. 5 the short interest was 2,612,000 shares, a decrease from Sept. 24 of 327,000 shares.

The aggregate short interest in the market at its May 25 peak of 5,589,700 shares, Whitney reported, was two-fifths of 1 per cent of the total shares listed as of June 1. The estimated size of the "long account" carried by brokers was approximately $9,000,000.

Explains Function.

Explaining the function of short selling in an open market, Whitney pointed out that every such seller is a potential buyer, "and this is a source of great stability to a market because experience shows that when prices suddenly decline the short sellers purchase stocks in order to discharge their loans."

Reporting on the stock exchange's efforts since last May to keep tabs on the short interest, Whitney disclosed the results of a long investigation into "bear raids" and reiterated that real liquidation rather than such practices, to which the exchange is opposed, had been responsible for declining prices.

TAKES NO ACTION

Directors of the Chicago Board of Trade considered the advisability of some measure to restrict short selling on its grain market yesterday but no action resulted.

The board was called in executive session by James C. Murray, president of the world's leading grain exchange, and heard the matter presented by Silas H. Strawn, attorney for the board and president of the chamber of commerce of the United States.

The directors issued no statement, and members of the board said they had neither taken action nor formulated any explanation of their position on the question of short sales. It was indicated the subject would be studied further at future meetings.

DIRECTORS OF FOX FILM CO. FAIL TO ACT ON DIVIDEND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 16.—Directors of the Fox Film corporation at a meeting held several days ago took no action on the dividend which ordinarily would have been distributed yesterday, it was learned today. The last previous payment was 62½ cents a share on July 15, when the rate was reduced from $1 quarterly.

The board had been scheduled to act on the quarterly dividends due on the no par class A and B shares on Sept. 21, but it will be recalled that the meeting was postponed because of a lack of a quorum.

Stockholders accordingly had expected some action to be taken when the statement of net earnings appeared on Oct. 3, but no announcement was forthcoming. The report, however, disclosed net profit of only $120,152 for the six months ended June 27, equal to 5 cents a share on 2,525,600, compared with $2.69 last year.

Because of this poor showing the street was inclined to believe that no further payments would be ordered at this time.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 16.—The Gillette Safety Razor company, including Autostrop Safety Razor company and operations of foreign subsidiaries, reported for the first nine months of 1931 consolidated net income of $3,433,211 after all charges and special reserve of $1,800,000 for obsolescence.

After dividend requirements on the $5 preference stock, the balance was equal to $1.13 a share on 1,993,769 common shares. For the corresponding period last year, net income, excluding Autostrop and its subsidiaries since acquired, amounted to $8,741,365, equal to $3.96 a share on 2,205,819 shares of stock then outstanding.

Net for the September quarter amounted to $750,866 after all charges and reserves for obsolescence, equal to 18 cents a share on the common against net for the Gillette company alone of $3,934,995, or $1.78 a share.

CHICAGO STOCK TICKER LAGS, BUT PRICES IMPROVE

Best Levels Reached in Final Trading.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Tickers slowed up yesterday as speculative activity ebbed further but stocks remained buoyant, attaining their best prices in the final minutes of trading, which was a reversal of Thursday's market action when the rally died out toward the end of the day.

On the Chicago exchange the volume of transactions fell below the 50,000 share mark for the first time in recent weeks. Trading in Middle West Utilities and Insull common fell off sharply with the latter issue leading in activity on a turnover of 7,000 shares. The net price improvement was moderate in all instances, ranging from a fraction for most of the Insull shares to 1¼ in the case of U. S. Radio. Minor recessions were chalked up for a few miscellaneous stocks including Swift & Co.

Helps Sentiment.

The news of the vote of confidence given the Bruening government in Germany helped sentiment materially. Because of the sensitiveness the market has shown over foreign developments recently the German vote was regarded as particularly important.

Directors of the Parker Pen company have voted to omit the quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share it was reported yesterday. The dividend is due Nov. 15. The 25 cents quarterly payment was initiated last quarter. Previously the stock had received 37½ cents quarterly.

In lieu of the customary cash dividend of 15 cents a share, the directors of Art Metal Works have declared a stock dividend of one-fiftieth of a share on the capital stock. The dividend is payable Nov. 1 to holders of record Oct. 20.

Announces Merger.

Alfred Kaufman, president of the Link-Belt company, yesterday announced that H. W. Caldwell & Son company, a subsidiary of Link-Belt, has been merged with the George W. Moore company of Chicago. The merged concerns will be known as the Caldwell-Moore division of the parent firm. Max W. Hurd, formerly president of the Moore concern, will be vice president of Link-Belt, in charge of the operations of the new subsidiary.

Memberships on the exchange were posted for transfer yesterday to Gilbert M. Clayton, assistant secretary and statistician of the exchange; Donald M. Woodruff & Co., Detroit, and Fred R. Tuerk of Fuller, Cruttenden & Co., Chicago. Mr. Clayton became statistician of the exchange early in 1929, and was appointed assistant secretary early last year.

Tells of Orderly Revolution Taking Place in Fuel Uses

BY SCRUTATOR.

Not so long ago Americans decided that they wanted to ride behind a motor instead of a horse and industries built up to supply this demand have grown until they normally employ, directly and indirectly, a total of 5,000,000 persons.

These remarks by James H. Wescott, jr., "Oil—It's Conservation and Waste," are relayed by the Fuel Oil journal:

"The increase in domestic oil burners in 1930-'39 will very likely be similar to the increase in motor truck registrations in 1920-'29. In the latter year such registrations were 424 per cent of those in 1929. On that basis there will be 2,268,400 oil burners in use in 1939."

Large Growth in Burners.

Ten years ago there were only 12,000 domestic oil burners in use. Last year there were 669,400. This growth closely parallels the growth in the number of passenger automobiles from 1901 to 1911, and that of motor trucks from 1910 to 1920.

The various periods have been selected for purposes of comparison because they represent the early stages of development in each case. The business of supplying mechanical apparatus to take the manual labor out of home heating is now about where the passenger automobile industry was in the early years of the century and where the motor truck industry was just before the war.

The oil burner people do not have the field to themselves. More than a quarter of a billion dollars was reported spent laying natural gas lines during 1930, and figures of the American Gas association show that 207 of the 1,060 companies selling natural and manufactured gas in July, 1930, had 114,473 house heating installations.

Keenly Aware of Trend.

Manufacturers of coal burning equipment are likewise keenly aware of the trend toward automatic firing and are rapidly developing markets for mechanical stokers.

Both the coal and oil people point out that there are 27,000,000 homes in the United States, more than 12,200,000 of which are owned by those who reside in them; that 13,300,000 are centrally heated, and that there are nearly 4,200,000 persons whose normal income is more than $3,000 per year, or enough to warrant investment in automatic heating equipment reasonably priced.

The Fuel Oil journal proudly records the fact that sales of oil burners equaled the 1929 record, and declares: "The social and economic changes resulting from this change from manual to mechanical, automatically controlled heating are likely finally to be as far reaching as the change from animal to mechanical transportation."

Oil has been burned for heat for fifty years, but its possibilities in that direction were not realized until the war came along with its "fuelless Mondays." Creative engineering talent was stimulated and a large potential demand was discovered.

Shift Emphasis to Marketing.

The first automatic oil burner was accepted as standard by the Underwriters' Laboratories in 1919. The intervening years have been spent largely in laying groundwork for future expansion. Emphasis has gradually shifted from problems of engineering to those of marketing.

This orderly revolution in the use of fuels which is already well underway affects the heating of homes, manufacturing plants, and commercial buildings, and it offers great possibilities for many different industries.

The early development of a unit that will not only heat a home in winter but cool it in summer, properly regulating the humidity at all times and built to sell at a price within the reach of the ordinary homeowner, is regarded as a distinct possibility by some well informed heating engineers.

MILWAUKEE RAILROAD TO RETURN 1,600 SHOP EMPLOYES TO WORK

Officials of the Milwaukee railroad announced yesterday that approximately 1,600 repair shop employes in Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Dubuque, Ia., and Galewood, Ill., would return to work Monday after a two month layoff.

Five hundred will be recalled to the locomotive and nearly that many more to the car repair shops in Milwaukee. About 350 will return to the car shops in Minneapolis, 100 at Dubuque, and 150 at Galewood, a suburb of Chicago.

All except those at Galewood will work on a four day basis. The suburban employes will work five days, the announcement said.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Oct. 16.—Four hundred men will be called back to work here Monday when the locomotive shops of the Rock Island railroad, closed since last Aug. 14, are reopened.

Approve Swope Plan.

New York, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Approval of the Swope plan to guarantee minimum weekly wages of $15 to shop employes between Nov. 1 and April 30 has been approved by 98 per cent of the factory workers at the Schenectady, N. Y., plant of the General Electric company. Balloting on the issue will be continued throughout the remainder of the week.

LOW PRICES OF MEAT ARE SEEN BOON TO SALES

Armour & Co. in its review of packing house trade conditions, says:

"Current attractively low prices of meats, affording great value for the buyer's food dollar, continued to keep most principal lines moving into consumption fairly well this week. Dressed beef showed a fair trade at about steady prices. Smoked meats again displayed a seasonally good tone and volume.

"Lambs were in liberal supply, receipts being somewhat larger than a week ago. Dressed trade averaged about steady, though with some irregularity. Veal business was rather sluggish with a downward trend.

"Fresh pork was irregularly easier in price on a fair volume of business. Foreign trade for the week showed a pretty fair tone. Collections were fairly good."

RETAIL PRICES SHOW LARGE MONTHLY DROP

Retail prices on Oct. 1 showed the second greatest monthly decline as compared with the previous month for the current year, according to the latest Fairchild retail price index. The index on Oct. 1 at $7.9 compares with $9.5 as of Sept. 1, $9.2 as of Aug. 1, and 100 as of Jan. 1. There was a decrease of 1.3 per cent on Oct. 1 as compared with Sept. 1. This follows only a fractional decrease from Aug. 1 to Sept. 1.

Retail prices, based on this index, have declined each month as compared with the previous month since the beginning of the year.

The recent sharp decline in raw cotton prices to a new low level since 1898 has already found some reflection in the decline in cotton items on Oct. 1 as compared with Sept. 1 for cotton hosiery, underwear, blankets, domestics, etc., showed sharp decreases. As compared with the first of the year, musical instruments, luggage, and men's underwear showed the greatest declines. Other items reaching substantially lower levels include silk fabrics, domestics, particularly sheets, pillow cases, blankets and comfortables, women's hosiery, etc.

Peerless Motor Corp. Plans Change in Capital Stock

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 16.—The Peerless Motor Car corporation has notified the New York Stock exchange of a proposed change in authorized capital stock from 750,000 shares of $10 par value to the same number of shares of $3 par value. New shares will be exchanged equally for the present stock. In April last year the stock was changed from $50 par to $10 par.

J. K. Riordan Seeks Board of Trade Reinstatement

A petition for reinstatement as a member of the Board of Trade and a plea for an injunction to restrain the directors of the organization from expelling in the future was filed in the Circuit court yesterday by James K. Riordan, a grain broker. The bill was the aftermath of the suspension on Wednesday of Riordan and his brother, Charles B. Riordan, his business partner.

At the time the directors for the Board of Trade refused to reveal the reason for their action. Riordan, however, charges in his bill yesterday that false claims presented by F. S. Lewis, head of F. S. Lewis & Co., another brokerage firm, had caused his suspension. The latter, the bill recites, informed the board that Riordan and his firm, Riordan, Martin & Co., had refused to pay debts amounting to $35,390. Not only denying his indebtedness, Riordan asserts that the concern of F. S. Lewis & Co. is his debtor to the amount of $22,000. The same company, he charges, owes his firm $18,000. Suits to collect these debts, he adds, are pending at present in the Superior court.

Stewart-Warner.

Will you please give me any information that you can on Stewart-Warner as regards financial condition and earnings?—W. B. K.

Stewart-Warner corporation occupies a prominent position in the automobile accessory field. It has recently diversified its business by placing on the market a high grade motor oil, home movie camera, a new type of neon sign, and aluminum household utensils. It is still dependent, however, on the sale of automobile accessories for its principal revenue. Competition in this line promises to be keen and may increase when its present patents expire.

Net income has shown wide variations. For 1930 it was $1,262,278, or 93 cents per share on 1,290,598 shares of capital stock, against $6,838,938, or $5.27 per share on 1,275,450 shares for 1929. For 1928 net was $7,752,532 and for 1927 $5,210,053. The decline of 1930 earnings was attributed to the low level of automobile output and the setting up of unusual revenues against accounts receivable and inventories. The downward trend of earnings continued through the first quarter of 1931, when net loss of $231,756 was reported. Net income for the second quarter of 1931 was $110,937, or 9 cents per share. For the first half of 1930 net income was $1,528,862, or $1.18 per share.

The company's policy of reinvesting earnings in the business followed from 1925 through 1929 is reflected in the June 30, 1931, balance sheet. Current assets were $10,846,300 and current liabilities were $1,112,306. Cash and marketable securities alone were more than $5,500,000.

Cash dividends were regularly paid from organization through November, 1930. The dividend due Feb. 15, 1931, was omitted because of unsatisfactory conditions. The company has no funded debt. The stock is a speculation.

Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies.

Please let me know about Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies preferred. —T. B.

Operating revenues of Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies Steamship lines in 1930 were the smallest for the last six years. Net income was $589,555, which was 1.04 times preferred dividend requirements, against 1929 net of $2,865,914, which was 4.8 times preferred dividend requirements. Net for 1928 was $648,135 and for 1927 $848,791. For the first seven months of 1931 net income was $132,474, or 42 per cent of preferred dividend requirements. For the corresponding 1930 period net was $1,122,053, which was 2.80 times preferred dividends.

On Dec. 31, 1930, current assets were $6,437,382 and current liabilities were $1,898,668. Working capital was $4,538,714. The company had outstanding $27,690,590 of funded debt and 113,230 shares of 5 per cent noncumulative preferred [par $100]. The preferred is speculative.

BY FRED HARVEY.

New York, Oct. 16—Further gains of 1 to 3 points were recorded by the more active issues of today's mild mannered little stock market. The rails once more showed the way, sentiment in their behalf being hopped up a bit by revived reports on an impending favorable decision on their rate increase petition by the interstate commerce commission.

Something of the same "information" was in circulation last week and the widespread credence placed in it was largely responsible for the continuation of the recovery movement that had its origin in the so-called Hoover credit rejuvenation project.

Word then was that the ruling might be expected along about Saturday and that it would mean an average increase of about 3 per cent for the roads instead of the 15 per cent they were asking. So persistent were predictions to this effect that the street got the impression that there had been a "leak" on the commission's findings.

The Tide Turns to Selling.

When Saturday came without bringing a fulfillment of the rosy prophecies, however, the enthusiasts began to quiet down and by Monday the tide had swung to the point where it was popularly "understood" that not only would the roads' petition be denied but that any hopes they might have of a reconsideration by the board would be dashed by a bold invitation to them to rescue the situation themselves by wholesale wage readjustments and other pruning measures.

Those who had been buyers naturally turned sellers and up to last night's closing the kicked-and-cuffed carrier shares had lost considerably more than a third of last week's gains. Today, however, it was no trouble at all to find those who were rocksure that the commission could not be so heartless and that the decision when it does come will do much toward easing the strain on the country's long suffering transportation arteries.

Moreover, it was insisted with fresh vehemence that the administration is about to do something to bolster railroad bonds. Announcement to this effect is popularly anticipated within the next few days—possibly over the week-end.

See Wage Cut Agreement.

Still another point in the new case for the rails is the growing belief that organized railroad labor will acquiesce to a 10 per cent reduction in wage scales, thus enabling the roads to cut their overhead to a tremendous degree and once more earn dividends for the holders of their shares.

All told, the prospect for the carriers was made to look rosier than it has for a long time. Atchison rose 5½ points on the change about, New Haven skipped ahead for 3⅝, New York Central 2⅝ and Union Pacific 5½ points. Gains of 1 to 3 points were the rule for the group as a whole.

The industrials followed the rails as they have grown accustomed to do here of late. Abatement of popular fears of a war between China and Japan and a blind belief that the latest advance in the rediscount rate is going to help conditions generally served to stimulate buying to some extent and reports of improved earnings came forward to aid individual issues here and there.

Steel Issues Improve.

Steel shares had a better day, United States Steel common advancing 2½ points on reports that the current $4 dividend rate will be maintained when the corporation's board of directors meets next Tuesday. The street has been under the impression for some time that a cut in the rate of the country's largest industrial concern was inevitable. Bethlehem and other steel issues moved ahead with the leader.

In the amusement group Fox Film A was fairly active at fractionally better prices in spite of the failure of the company's directors to take action on its dividend due yesterday.

Utility, oil and merchandise issues followed the trend. American Telephone added nearly 4 points to its recent runup based on the unexpectedly good earnings report for the last nine months. Auburn Auto once more distinguished itself with an 8 point gain.

Top yesterday, $7.25; average, $6.25.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 300; hogs, 8,000; sheep, 10,000.

Hog prices fell to new low levels on yesterday's market. The extreme top at $5.40 was 10c under the previous low spot this year and lowest since March, 1903, when $4.50 went back to November, 1902, for a lower top. Hogs in that month sold down to $4.40, the lowest since 1899, when top prices were below the $4.00 line.

The range of prices narrowed again yesterday. The top and average at $5.40 and $5.15 respectively show a spread of only 25c, the narrowest of the year, and about the narrowest on record for October. Late last week the two prices were 60c apart and in July, when the movement of packing sows was in full swing, the top and average showed a $2.00 spread, the biggest of the year.

Receipts of hogs at Chicago at 23,000 were equal to the largest for Friday since last March, and, augmented by 9,500 carried over from the previous session, the available supply exceeded trade requirements. However, buyers were eager for hogs after the new low price basis had been established, and only 2,500 of the poorer kinds remained at the close. A short range of $5.25@5.40 bought most of the good 200@300 lb butchers, while most of the 150@180 lb averages were sold at $5.05@5.20.

Plenty of Bids.

There were plenty of buyers for $4.50 winter contracts for hogs yesterday, but offers to sell were few and the lowest offer posted was $5.00 on December medium and heavy grades. On the "to arrive" market mediums for next Monday's delivery were bid $5.25.

Hardly enough cattle were on the market yesterday to fully test quotations, but strength was plainly evident in scattered sales of medium quality steers, which comprised bulk of the supply. Nine long yearlings, averaginf 1,109 lbs, brought $9.75, the best price of the day, while a few others were good enough to reach the $8.00 mark.

Steers and yearlings scored gains of 25@40c during the last few days and some are selling 50c above a week ago, yearlings meeting best action after midweek. The latter reached $10.35 Thursday, the highest for yearlings since Aug. 29. Top weighty beeves brought $10.50. Cows and heifers were steady for the week.

Calves finished 75c to $1.00 above a week ago. In the whole list of prices in the cattle yards this week the bull market was the only class showing a loss. They dropped 35@50c.

Lambs in Sharp Slump.

Buyers took advantage of the second largest Friday sheep receipts of the year and slashed quotations 50@75c yesterday, erasing all of what salesmen had gained on Thursday's trade. Top range lambs went down 85c at $7.25, which was also paid for hand picked natives by city butchers.

Packers bought natives at $6.75@7.00 with heavier sorts. However, lambs still show 50@75c advance for the week and some of the good western are selling $1.00 above a week ago. Aged sheep were unchanged and yearlings slumped 25@50c in sympathy with the break in fat lambs. Outside demand has been the strongest support in the lamb market lately. Eastern orders during the first four days of the week increased almost 70 per cent compared with a week ago.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 300 cattle, 8,000 hogs and 10,000 sheep, against 135 cattle, 10,927 hogs and 3,342 sheep the previous Saturday and 682 cattle, 11,377 hogs and 7,960 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs at Chicago for next Monday are estimated from 38,000 to 50,000. S. Lund and H. Wolfe marked 50,000, J. M. Waters 47,000, W. T. Reneker and R. Trullinger 46,000, F. Gehrmann, R. B. Ellis, W. Garrett, H. S. Turner and A. G. Welbener 45,000, F. Knutzen 44,000, E. S. Waterbury, C. Southwick and J. T. Brown 42,000, F. W. Young and F. B. Orb 40,000 and J. A. Bunyan 35,000.

BUYING KEEPS WHEAT PRICES ON THE UPGRADE

Foreign Demand Appears —May Continue.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat prices continue to hold close to the best figures on the present upturn, and while trade in the aggregate was not large yesterday there was sufficient buying in evidence on the setback dips to keep the market above the finish of the previous day. The advance was at net gains of ½c with December 50¾@50¾c; May, 54¾@55c, and July, 55¼c.

The long expected heavy and continued buying movement for North American wheat appears to have developed and during the last four days it is estimated that Europe and the east have taken between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 bu, the bulk of which was from Buenos Aires, although there were some Canadian shipments included in the total.

Owing to the near exhaustion of supplies of old grain in the southern hemisphere, with less than 75,000,000 bu held in Argentina and Australia, including the amounts which will be carried over, foreign buyers must of necessity take liberal amounts of the new American grain, as the trade [illegible] Wisnig Leads Advance.

The discount of around 11 per cent on Canadian currency as compared with American is regarded as largely responsible for the bulk of the foreign buying being in Manitobas. Winnipeg reversed its recent action yesterday by closing at the top with net gains of ¾@1¼c with December at the close in Canadian funds.

Buying by houses with seaboard, Duluth and Chicago connections was largely responsible for the strength in the pit, and with removal of hedges against export sales of 1,000,000 to 1,250,000 bu for the day readily absorbed the hedging sales against grain offered at interior points.

It is estimated that farmers in the three Canadian provinces have only 200,000,000 bu wheat left to come forward compared with 144,000,000 bu at this season a year ago. Threshing is completed in Manitoba; 85 per cent in Saskatchewan, and 60 per cent in Alberta, but the favorable weather which has existed of late is resulting in rapid progress. Deliveries at country points are expected to let up early in November.

Liverpool wheat showed unexpected strength and gained ⅝@1c per bu with December closing at 55⅝c figured on the basis of $3.35 for sterling. A better willing demand and firmness of shippers' offers were the main influences, the upturn more than offsetting the small decline in the exchange rate.

Bids on country run cash wheat to arrive have been advanced 1½c by Chicago handlers in the last two days in an effort to attract grain this way from the interior, and the basis in the cash market was ¼@¾c higher yesterday. So far there is little evidence of any weakening in the position of the southwestern farmer who continues to hold for higher prices.

Oats Has Narrow Range.

Corn futures held within a range of ⅝@⅞c with trade almost entirely of a local character. The pit element was talking rather bearish did not care to press the selling side in view of the firmness in wheat and the close was ⅝@⅞c higher with December finishing at 35¼@35⅝c; May, 39⅜@39⅝c, and July, 41¼c. Cribbing of corn was regarded as making excellent progress due to the clear and cool weather prevailing over the belt, and the forecast indicated settled weather over the week-end. Country offerings were small and shipping demand slow.

Cash and commission houses were moderate buyers of oats while the local element sold. Trade in the aggregate was light and the finish was easy to ¼c higher with December, 32c; May, 24⅜c, and July, 24¼c.

The cargoes of rye are being bought back to Chicago from Georgian bay ports and one cargo of 271,[illegible] bu is understood to have been sold. Prices closed ¼c lower to ¼c higher with December, 38⅝c, and May, 41⅝c.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—(AP)—SUGAR—Raw was quieter today, but the undertone was steady and buyers showed more interest at the last paid price of 3.40c for spots, with nothing firmly offered below 3.45c. After opening 1 point lower to 3 points higher, futures showed little further change, except that the partial decline was recovered with the market closing net unchanged to 3 points higher. All told only 8,200 tons changed hands. Prices follow:

LEGAL NOTICES.

SOUTH PARK COMMISSIONERS Proposals for DOCKS AND BULKHEAD FOR APPROACH VIADUCTS TO CHICAGO RIVER BRIDGE, CHICAGO.

Sealed proposals will be received by the South Park Commissioners, 57th-st. and Cot-tage Grove-av., Chicago, Illinois, until 12:00 o'clock Noon, prevailing Chicago time, Nov. 2, 1931, for the construction of approx-imately 1,125 lineal feet of dock along the south bank of the Chicago River for ap-proximately 392 lineal feet of bulkhead in Lake Michigan and connection with said dock, for approximately 119 lineal feet of bulkhead across a slip at Randolph-st., and for making proper connections between said docks and bulkheads and abutting structures, all in Chicago, Illinois, including piles, sheet piling, waler, tie rods, anchor piles, re-inforced concrete cap, mooring posts, ex-cavation, backfill, heavy rock fill in bulk-head, the removal of portions of a present dock, the disposal of waste material and the furnishing of all labor, material, tools and equipment thereof, in accordance with plans and specifications prepared by the Engineering Division of the South Park Commissioners.

Plans and specifications may be obtained at the office of the Commissioners. Bid-ding blanks will be found in the specifica-tions. Preliminary examination of the plans may be made at the office.

Two copies of specifications and one set of plans will be furnished each prospective bidder upon application and the deposit of $50.00. This deposit will be refunded upon return of the plans in an unmutilated and serviceable condition, within one week after the award of contract.

All specifications, including bidding sheets, must be authenticated by the stamp of the Secretary of the South Park Commissioners. No bid will be considered unless submitted on a bidding sheet attached to the specifi-cations received from the South Park Com-missioners, and authenticated as above de-scribed, submitted for delivery at the said Secretary and enclosed in authenticated en-velope. No writing or other distinguish-ing mark shall be placed on the envelope.

Each bidder shall submit Proposal No. 1, covered by bids on items 1 to 7, in-clusive, and on item 12; or Proposal No. 2 covered by bids on items 1 to 7, inclusive, and, on item No. 12; or may submit both proposals No. 1 and No. 2. The work may be awarded to one contractor under Pro-posal No. 1 and to another contractor under Proposal No. 2, or all of the work may be awarded to one contractor at the discretion of the Commissioners after a canvass of the bids.

All unit prices for additions and deduc-tions must be submitted by each bidder whether his proposal covers all or a part of the work. Only bids, blanks, sheets, of record in the office of the Commissioners as having received specifications, will be con-sidered.

A deposit to the amount of five per cent (5%) of the aggregate amount of the highest proposal named in the bid, either in certified check payable to the Order of the South Park Commissioners, or in car-rency, must accompany each proposal as a guarantee of good faith. Those deposits will be returned to all bidders within thirty (30) days after the date of opening pro-posals, except that the deposit of the next bidder fails or refuses to execute a con-tract and to furnish the required bond with-in ten (10) days after notice of the award of contract, the Commissioners may retain his deposit as liquidated damages.

The successful bidder will be required to enter into a contract and give a surety bond of twenty-five (25%) per cent of the amount of the contract.

Under an Act of the State of Illinois, in force July 1, 1931, the contractor and his subcontractors and all persons employed or mechanics employed on this job not less than the rates of wages for laborers and mechanics prevailing in the county where lands owned and controlled by the South Park Commissioners, except in the manu-facture, transportation, loading or un-loading of articles or materials produced elsewhere than at the site where the work is under construction, alteration or repair. Said prevailing rates of wages have been ascertained by the South Park Commission-ers and approved by said Commissioners by an ordinance adopted July 15, 1931. Those are as follows, to wit:

PREVAILING RATES OF WAGES PER HOUR WITHIN THE TERRITORY OF LANDS OWNED AND CONTROLLED BY THE SOUTH PARK COMMISSIONERS FOR LABORERS AND MECHANICS:

AUBURNS—1931'S, SEDANS, PHAETON SE-dans, broughams; free wheeling, wire whls. "New" would be any one's first exclamation on a look; sheet attached to the specifi-cations received from the South Park Com-missioners, and authenticated as above de-scribed, submitted for delivery at the said Secretary and enclosed in authenticated en-velope. No writing or other distinguish-ing mark shall be placed on the envelope.

Each bidder shall submit Proposal No. 1, covered by bids on items 1 to 7, in-clusive, and on item 12; or Proposal No. 2 covered by bids on items 1 to 7, inclusive, and, on item No. 12; or may submit both proposals No. 1 and No. 2. The work may be awarded to one contractor under Pro-posal No. 1 and to another contractor under Proposal No. 2, or all of the work may be awarded to one contractor at the discretion of the Commissioners after a canvass of the bids.

All unit prices for additions and deduc-tions must be submitted by each bidder whether his proposal covers all or a part of the work. Only bids, blanks, sheets, of record in the office of the Commissioners as having received specifications, will be con-sidered.

A deposit to the amount of five per cent (5%) of the aggregate amount of the highest proposal named in the bid, either in certified check payable to the Order of the South Park Commissioners, or in car-rency, must accompany each proposal as a guarantee of good faith. Those deposits will be returned to all bidders within thirty (30) days after the date of opening pro-posals, except that the deposit of the next bidder fails or refuses to execute a con-tract and to furnish the required bond with-in ten (10) days after notice of the award of contract, the Commissioners may retain his deposit as liquidated damages.

The successful bidder will be required to enter into a contract and give a surety bond of twenty-five (25%) per cent of the amount of the contract.

Under an Act of the State of Illinois, in force July 1, 1931, the contractor and his subcontractors and all persons employed or mechanics employed on this job not less than the rates of wages for laborers and mechanics prevailing in the county where lands owned and controlled by the South Park Commissioners, except in the manu-facture, transportation, loading or un-loading of articles or materials produced elsewhere than at the site where the work is under construction, alteration or repair. Said prevailing rates of wages have been ascertained by the South Park Commission-ers and approved by said Commissioners by an ordinance adopted July 15, 1931. Those are as follows, to wit:
